NAMES OF LOAN SHARKS TO BE HANDED BRIDE

VICTIMS VOLUNTEER TO TESTIFY IN COURT

PATHETIC INCIDENTS ARE TOLD IN LETTERS

Drop in Share Prices Causes Apparently Affluent to Borrow Money.

By AUSTIN T. ROGERS.

The fact that scores of loan sharks charging rates as high as 1,000 per cent interest per year continue to flourish in Washington is in itself proof that many persons in the District have let themselves fall into the clutches of these usurious lenders.

But even more impressive are the inside facts contained in innumerable letters which have been pouring into the offices of The Post since this series was started Sunday. They show that not only has the loan shark wrapped his tentacles around the low-salaried worker; he also has some debtors on his books who to all outward appearances are highly affluent. This condition has become particularly prevalent since the stock market upheaval of last fall.

The Post has arranged to turn over to Corporation Counsel William W. Bride not only a list of the loan sharks, but much detailed information as well with which cases against the fraudulent lenders may be prosecuted in the courts. In the data to be delivered to Mr. Bride are the names, addresses and other information pertaining to numerous victims who have come forward and volunteered to testify in court proceedings.

A loan shark who is put out of business by the law is definitely eliminated as a menace to the particular community in which he formerly has operated. He may go to some other state and resume operations, but he will be through so far as the District is concerned. And The Post is assured by District officials that not only are definite steps about to be taken to remove those loan sharks involved in evidence obtained by The Post, but also to prevent the influx of others who might hope to fill the places vacated by those who are put out of business.

Pitiful Incidents Revealed.

Some of the letters received by The Post from victims of loan sharks reveal pitiful cases in which borrowers who dealt with the usurious lenders at a time when they were temporarily pressed for immediate funds not only have been unable since to liquidate the original obligation, but have had to go further and further into debt, at the same excessive rates, in order to meet their weekly or monthly payments.

In this series, no attention is paid to anonymous letters, for the reason that it is impossible to check the accuracy of their contents. None of the letters has been taken solely at face value; in each instance, where a letter has revealed a situation within the scope of this series, the information given has been verified to make sure that the facts as stated were correct and not exaggerated. Naturally, the confidences of those who have supplied The Post with information supplemental to its own investigations will not be violated and their names will not be made public.

There is the case, for instance, of a woman who takes The Post to task on the grounds that this series may make it impossible for her to go further into debt to loan sharks in order to square herself with those who already have her in their clutches.

She began by borrowing $100 to pay for an operation and gave the loan shark a note for $140. Finding her illness more expensive than she had anticipated, she was forced, she explains, to borrow from another loan shark in order to meet the payments to the first.

Lets Other Bills Lag.

That brought her weekly payments up to the point where in order to meet them she had to let other bills lag. The obvious result was that she had to borrow again, and every time she borrowed more—each time at the same annual rate of 933 per cent, her payments became just so much harder to meet.

Where she started off borrowing $100, she now is obligated to loan sharks, she says, in the amount of $560, and her weekly payments are $28. And yet all she got was $400.

"Now," she writes, "I am harassed and worried, working day and night and under a daily helpless grind. Would you say I had been extravagant? No! It was just desperation.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: So far as the primary election results disclose anything, it seems to be the presence of a rather large protest vote. This has not been directed in general at any particular issue but appears to be in the nature of dissatisfaction with present conditions. The German elections and the revolutions in South America indicate that it is not confined to this country but is world-wide.

The dissatisfied have not always been victorious. But, beginning in Illinois and trailing along through California, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina and Wisconsin, they were sufficient to defeat the incumbents in State or national office.

A situation of this nature is especially difficult for organized society to meet. When there are specific abuses they can be reformed. But when there is simply a general complaint that the Government is not doing things that can only be done by the hardest kind of work and the most skilled management of the people themselves, the answer is so long and involved that the voters are slow to grasp it.

It is a time when the conservative and constructive influences of the world without regard to party lines or international boundaries must cooperate.

$37,000 THEFT LAID TO CHURCH LEADER

Member of Virginia House Arrested in Shortage at Orphanage.

IS FORMER DRY OFFICIAL

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—James P. Jones, recognized moral leader in the State Legislature, former treasurer of the Virginia Anti-saloon League and prominent church worker, faces a hearing in court here October 4 on charges of the larceny of $37,976.40 from an orphans' home.

Jones was arrested today on a warrant ordered by Commonwealth's Attorney Dave E. Satterfield. He was released in $15,000 bail for his appearance in court.

The arrest followed disclosure, the Commonwealth's attorney said, of "additional evidence" in an investigation which has been under way since a discrepancy was discovered in Jones' accounts as treasurer of the Virginia Methodists Orphanage last May and Jones resigned.

Satterfield said it had been discovered that Jones had deposited $2,635.77 in the last six months to the credit of James P. Jones, treasurer of the building fund of the Decatur Street Methodist Church, and that this money was taken from funds of the orphanage. The Rev. Otis L. Gilliam, pastor of the church, said he had no knowledge of a building fund.

The first discrepancy in Jones' books as orphanage treasurer was revealed in an audit in May. Jones turned over his books to the trustees in July with approximately $14,000 cash, but the audit revealed an additional shortage in excess of $23,000. Jones offered a settlement and it was accepted and put in legal form in August.

The Commonwealth's attorney, however, ordered that a report be made to him. Jones, a former treasurer of the Antisaloon League, has been an active church and prohibition leader for years. In the House of Delegates, where he has served continuously since 1922, he was recognized as the spokesman for the moral forces, being a member of the moral and social welfare committee.

Coroner's Jury Frees Driver in Boy's Death

A verdict of accidental death was rendered yesterday by the coroner's jury which considered the death Wednesday of Albert Jeffries, 4 years old, of 3213 Volta place northwest, who was knocked down and killed before the eyes of his mother as he played in front of his home.

The verdict had the effect of freeing Dewey Rinker, of L street near Seventeenth street northwest, driver of the truck which struck the boy.

RITCHIE NOMINATED; DRY REPEAL IS ASKED

Maryland Governor, Seeking Fourth Term, Bars Boom for Presidency.

STATE RUM OPTION AIM

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was formally nominated for his fourth term today by the Democratic State convention on a platform which urged return of liquor control to the States and in the meantime modification of the Volstead act to allow manufacture of light wines and beer.

The convention for the first time since 1923 failed to indorse the Maryland executive for the presidential nomination, at the request of the governor himself.

On the eve of the meeting Mr. Ritchie made public a letter to Senator Millard E. Tydings, the chairman, in which he said: "The proceedings of our convention should not be diverted from the present campaign in this State by any consideration of who our next nominee for the Presidency ought to be."

The liquor plank declared the present system of national prohibition constituted a "clear departure" from the principle of States' rights and was "destructive of the liberties of our people." It urged steps "to turn the whole subject back to the States."

"We believe that each State should recognize the principle of local option within its borders, and that the Federal Government should protect any State against interstate shipments which would contravene its laws. In the meanwhile, we believe that the Volstead act should be amended so to to permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wine where permitted by local law," the platform said.

"As long as the eighteenth amendment is part of the Constitution * * * we feel the responsibility for enforcement rests on the Federal Government alone. We recognize, of course, that it should be upheld and respected. We are forced, however, to realize the Volstead act, supplemented by the Jones act, has caused a disregard for law and order and a degree of actual lawlessness unparalleled in this country."

Gov. Ritchie, in seeking his fourth term, is aiming at an unprecented mark, that of serving fifteen years as a State executive. He has consecutively served two terms of four years and one of three years.

The Republican nominee for governor is Mayor William F. Broening, of Baltimore, and the Republican State convention is scheduled for Monday.

CAPITAL GROUP BUYS GAS FIRM IN ALEXANDRIA

30-YEAR OPERATION FRANCHISE GRANTED

City Council Approves of Transaction by Vote of 4 to 1.

EXPANSION PROGRAM WILL BE LAUNCHED

Ticer Resolution, Asking to Submit Proposition to Voters, Is Lost.

Purchase of the Alexandria Gas Co. by the Seaboard Investment Trust, of Boston, owners of the Washington and Georgetown gas companies, was announced last night by Wilton J. Lambert, attorney for the purchasers. The deal also conveys a 30-year operation franchise.

Sale of the Alexandria company was approved by a vote of four to one at a meeting of the town council in Alexandria yesterday afternoon. The purchase price was $750,000, which will be paid to the City of Alexandria, which owned the plant. Of this amount $22,500 already has been paid to the city by certified check deposited with city officials of Alexandria a week ago, when the new owners formally submitted their bid of $750,000 for the municipal plant of the nearby Virginia metropolis.

Taking over of the municipal plant by the owners of the Washington Gas Co. is but one step in their program of expansion outlined at the time the Washington and Georgetown companies were purchased.

Will Be Important Plant.

The Alexandria plant is to be developed into one of the most important gas-producing plants near Washington. Expansion plans will be put in operation at once. Two hundred miles of new mains are to be laid within the next four months under the terms of the contract offered Alexandria as a part of the purchase consideration.

Work on these is to be begun immediately, George B. Fraser, a vice president of the Capital company, said, and will result in employment of many men. In order to complete laying of mains, Mr. Lambert said that it may be necessary to work day and night, but the work will be completed on time, he declared.

Another part of the purchase contract provided for reduced gas rates for Alexandrians and rates submitted at the time the new owners submitted their formal bid call for a reduction of the basic household gas rate from $1.45 net to a graduated scale running from $1.15 per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.90 a thousand cubic feet, which will mean a reduction of between $40,000 and $50,000 in the city's gas bill annually.

Extension of Service.

Gas service is to be extended immediately to towns in Alexandria and Arlington Counties and neighborhoods which have not heretofore had gas service will have it in the next few months, Mr. Lambert said.

This is only a part of the plans for the expansion of the Alexandria plant. The new owners plan to develop in the Virginia city a by-product plant, as announced some time ago. At that time the site was not disclosed.

The by-product plant will be built on the property of the old Robert Portner Brewing Co., it was said. It will play an important part in the gas service to Washington and nearby Maryland as well as to nearby Virginia, Mr. Lambert said.

Ticer Opposes Action.

The bid of the Seaboard Investment Trust for purchase of the Alexandria plant and a 30-year franchise for its operation was accepted by the Alexandria city council with only

PROTOCOL BEARING ON ENTRY OF U. S. INTO WORLD COURT BLOCKED BY CUBA AT GENEVA

ISLAND NATION ONLY OPPONENT, IS CHARGE

Incident Perils Measure to Place America on Tribunal.

SENATE VOTE DUE ON PLAN THIS DECEMBER

France and Italy Despair of Agreeing on Naval Parity; Drug Parley Called.

Geneva, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The little Republic of Cuba today blocked a move in a League of Nations assembly committee to put into effect the protocol for revision of the World Court statute. The action caused anxiety among many members of the league.

Informed persons felt that the failure of this project might embarrass the United States administration in its efforts to obtain Senate ratification of that other and more famous protocol, which provides for American entry to the World Court.

Cuba won her point today after a verbal combat between her Ambassador at Washington, Orestes Ferrara, and the Greek delegate, Nicholas Politis.

Ferraras Hot Retort.

M. Politis, understood to be voicing the sentiments of a number of states which have agreed to the revision protocol, called the assembly's attention to the fact that Cuba was the only opponent of immediate effectiveness for the protocol.

He said the Island Republic's attitude was regretable and he charged the Cuban government with failure to join in an effort of good will.

Senor Ferrara responded with vigor, asserting that Cuba's sovereign right was being challenged.

"We have come here to collaborate, not to obey," he shouted. "Cuba joined the league because it was believed to be a society of nations and not a state supreme court over other states. Cuba will not submit to dictation by M. Politis, nor by Greece, nor by any members of the League of Nations!"

Dr. Wu Peacemaker.

C. C. Wu, Chinese delegate, and Vittorio Scialoja, chairman of the committee, intervened to calm the controversy. Shortly afterward Senor Ferrara announced in smoother tones it was possible that the Cuban government, "after general ratification of the protocol" by other states, might change its mind and add its approval. Representatives of other governments hoped tonight this suggestion might become an actuality, thereby giving unanimous support to the protocol.

Dr. Wu said China regretted the protocol could not be brought into force, but nobody, he added, could challenge Cuba's rights to her objections which, indeed, were provided for in the protocol itself.

"This warm passage of arms has gone far enough," said Dr. Wu, with a smile and a slow drawl in his English. "You have noticed that the temperature in this room is higher than the temperature outside. I move the discussion closed."

Branded "Election Speech."

M. Politis said Cuba was the only member of the league, not having made "an effort of good will," to bring the protocol into force. He said Cuba's position was most regrettable.

Senor Ferrara replied with vigor that Cuba could not submit to a discussion of her reasons by the committee. "These reasons are an expression of Cuba's sovereignty," he as-

Prohibition Ratings Changed At Insistence of Politicians

Civil Service Commission Accused by Campbell in Canfield Case.

LaGuardia Shown Busy to Retain Henchman as Dry Agent.

Twelfth of a series of articles by the former prohibition administrator of the Eastern New York district.

By MAJ. MAURICE CAMPBELL.

Politics took prohibition to its bosom as an infant, nurtured it, brought it up the way the boys in the district club wanted it to go. The result is a delinquent child which can never be reclaimed.

The institution of civil service in the prohibition service was an attempt to put some conscience into prohibition enforcement. And such improvement as there has been only illustrates how bad the situation is.

Political henchmen can pass civil service examinations. Non-political appointes can be herded into political organizations after they get their jobs. The Civil Service Commission in Washington has been known to change its rating.

Political influence bears on appointments in the Prohibition Service from top to bottom. I had to go to Samuel S. Koenig and get his O. K. before I could get William D. Moss, my assistant in charge of the rejuvenated enforcement activities under my regime, a civil service appointment. Moss' vigor had angered the politicians. No sooner had I come to New York than I had to fight to keep John E. O'Neill, my very Compatriotis in war, compatriots now in peace, more than 200 delegates from nine countries assembled here yesterday to open the eleventh annual conference of Fidac, the Federation Interalliee Des Anciens Combattants, with the avowed aim of strengthening world brotherhood among all nations.

They were formally welcomed by President Hoover late yesterday afternoon, when he and Mrs. Hoover held a reception for them at the White House following the welcoming session in the auditorium of the D. A. R. building.

The President expressed his appreciation of the work which Fidac is doing, and voiced the hope that the conference here would be fruitful in friendly inspirations between the delegates and the countries they represented.

"Fidac has grown to be a powerful organization," he declared, "and its possibilities for the promotion of peace are unlimited. I have great faith in the organization."

Following the reception in the White House, the delegates were dinner guests of Gen. John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American Army during the World War, at Wardman Park Hotel. Addresses by Joseph Granier, attached to the French ministry of war, and head of the French delegation, and Col. Thad H. Brown, general counsel of the Federal Radio Commission, were delivered at the dinner and broadcast over an international hook-up.

Col. Brown, in his address last night, paid tribute to the Unknown

Athletics Clinch Flag; Cards Nearer Crown

The Athletics clinched the pennant in the American League, and the Cardinals moved nearer the flag in the National as the result of developments yesterday.

Their victory over the White Sox while the Nats lost to Cleveland decided the pennant in favor of the Athletics. By dealing the Robins a third straight defeat the Cards took a two-game lead, with only nine games to play—a margin great enough to be called almost safe. The Cubs stayed in the running, 2½ games behind despite their loss to the Giants.

(Associated Press Sports Editor).

Newport, R. I., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—In a race that smashed all records for America's Cup competition, Enterprise today completed the rout of the last of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrocks on the high seas and the classic emblem of world yachting supremacy remains safely in the custody of Uncle Sam for the eightieth year since it was captured in British waters.

The slim, white and bronze bodied cup defender, beautifully sailed by her millionaire skipper, Harold Stirling Vanderbilt, ran away from Shamrock V, in the first ten miles of the 30-mile triangular course. Thus she settled matters before the contest was a third over.

The American sloop had little trouble holding enough margin in to capture the fourth and deciding race of the series, concluded in choppy seas and a breeze that blew up to eighteen knots, tilting the racers at a rakish angle.

Enterprise was the victor by exactly 5 minutes and 17 seconds, covering the course in the record time of 3 hours 10 minutes 13 seconds.

This was not only by far the fastest race of the 1930 series, but was the fastest 30 miles ever sailed in the

Police Discover New Clew To Baker Slaying Is False

Virginian's Second-Hand Automatic Pistol, Bought in June, Scrutinized; Revolver Was Used by Killer; Veterans' Post Sends Check to Aid Campbell.

Although Herbert M. Campbell is under indictment for the murder of Mary E. Baker, authorities have just run out a clew in the form of bullets from a .32-caliber automatic which was turned over to the Bureau of Standards by a Virginia man.

Carl Schulze, 28 years old, who lives at Glencarlyn, Va., turned over the evidence to the Bureau; but it was found that they had no connection with the crime since Schulze's evidence was from an automatic pistol, while the gun used in the murder was a revolver.

Schulze told Lieut. Edward J. Kelly that he purchased it from a young man who had bought it from a colored man in June. Schulze needed it at the officers training camp at Fort Eustis, Va.

Because of the manner in which the gun came into his possession, Schulze fired test shots and delivered the cartridges to the Bureau of Standards; but they found worthless as clews.

Inspector William S. Shelby and Lieut. Kelly have not relented in their investigation of the crime, even though Campbell stands indicted. Their motive is to attempt to prove the innocence or the guilt of the man. The strongest link against the Arlington County man is the identification by ballistics experts of his revolver as the death weapon.

Another Veterans of Foreign Wars post has come to the financial and Look through the advertising columns of The Post this morning. Note the extremely low prices — the savings — that are offered on desirable merchandise of known quality. Prices that you know are much below the actual worth of these articles. Donovan Calls Prohibition Failure; Demands Repeal Assistant U. S. Attorney General Under Coolidge Tells Young New York Republicans That Government Should Inaugurate State Regulation.

New York, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Col. William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States and once prominently mentioned for the Attorney Generalship in the Cabinet of President Hoover, declared for repeal of the eighteenth amendment in an address today before the Young Republican Club.

Asserting that the eighteenth amendment had failed and nullification had "not proved practicable," he urged that the Republican party in New York State take a position on prohibition which "has the dignity, integrity and appeal of an honest conviction."

"It should continue," he said of the party in the State, "to indorse the ideal of temperance and to aid actively in its attainment through effectual liquor regulation. The eighteenth amendment has failed to accomplish this purpose and should be repealed.

"However, we can not urge repeal alone. We must make sure that a sincere effort will be made to prevent a recurrence of ancient evils. Instead of attempting to exact cooperation of the States by coercion, truly effective regulation should be sought.

"Congress should exercise its constitutional power to control the liquor traffic and should fulfill its constitutional duty to protect the States from violation of their laws."

He likened the position of the Republican party today to the plight

serted, "and must not be challenged. Her reasons must be accepted."

He concluded that M. Politis' remarks were in the "nature of an election speech."

Senor Scialoja admitted that he was partly to blame for permitting the discussion to continue in a controversial tone. He said both M. Politis and Senor Ferrara had been out of order, and closed the discussion.

Cuban Judge Blamed.

M. Politis, a diminutive figure, aroused the Cuban giant with his accusation that Cuba had shown "bad spirit" and taken a "regrettable position," but it was not apparent that the thrusts had assumed a personal phase.

M. Politis' criticism are recognized here as an expression of the vexation of many governments that the protocol has been blocked by one country. It is charged informally here by the critics of Cuba that her objections arise from the opposition of the Cuban judge on the court, Senor Antonio Sanchez de Bustamente, to living permanently away from Cuba and abandoning his home law practice.

These critics very frankly declare that Bustamente himself is blocking the entry into force of revision of the protocol.

Senor Ferrara's reference to M. Politis' "Election speech" was interpreted in some quarters as meaning the Greek delegate was making a speech to defeat a future re-election of Bustamente. M. Politis himself is not among the nominees for the court.

How Protocol Affects U. S.

The possible effect on Senate ratification of the instrument which provides for American entry into the World Court was analyzed tonight as follows:

This protocol, which the Senate will consider in December, contains the so-called Root reservations, which remove many American objections with regard to advisory opinions and American interests.

These reservations provide that no advisory opinion on any issue touching American interests shall be asked for until the league has informed the United States of its intention to seek such opinion and authorization is given; also, that if any objections of the United States can not be met the country shall have the right to withdraw from the court "without any imputation of its unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace and good-will."

Routine Work Continues.

However, the protocol for revision—the one which Cuba opposes—also contains a provision formally assuring procedure which will guarantee the protection of American rights, and it is understood this is regarded in American official quarters as of great value in satisfying critics who fear the world court might, without United States consent, give advisory opinions on questions involving American interests. It is this provision which Cuba's solitary opposition is blocking.

The routine work of other assembly committees went on this afternoon, while the council held a brief session to dispose of a number of matters or postpone consideration on them until the January meeting.

The disarmament committee spent the afternoon in seeking an agreement on the wording of the draft convention which would give financial assistance to a nation attacked by an aggressor. The humanitarian committee reviewed ten years of work in attempting to remedy evils connected with opium traffic and in promoting better health conditions in the various member countries.

Drug Conference Called.

The council of the league decided to call a world conference on the limitation of the manufacture of narcotic drugs to meet May 27, 1931.

A conference of narcotic drug manufacturing states, called by Great Britain for October 27 next, will precede it. The preliminary meetings of the manufacturing countries is designed to arrange quotas by percentages among themselves.

French and Italian negotiators despaired of reaching an accord on their naval parity difference today and concentrated upon securing an agreement on actual ship construction between 1930 and 1936.

They decided that if such an agreement could be reached, based on the minimum actual requirements of each nation, the question of broad principle involved in parity—which prevented these nations from participating in the three-power London pact—could well simmer in its own juice until a new conference is called under the London treaties in 1936.

Still Apart on Parity.

The negotiators are said to feel that by that time the situation might be much clarified, and might even solve itself.

The decision to work on temporary figures, it is felt, may enable the two nations to go before the preparatory disarmament commission of the league at the November 3 meeting in a spirit to collaborate on preparation for a general air-land-sea limitation conference to be held next year.

As to the parity question, however, persons close to both French and Italian sources assert that the nations are as far apart as ever.

Textile Walkout Looms in Danville

Vote Taken, but Aesult Is Kept Secret Pending New York Action.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 18.—A strike vote among members of Local 1865, United Textile Workers of America, to determine whether a walkout will be called in the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills was completed here tonight, but the result will not be made known until the action is ratified by the executive council of the international in New York.

Miss Matilda Lindsay, ranking official of trade unionism here in the absence of Francis J. Gorman, international vice president, stated tonight that "there is nothing to give out." Pressed for a report on the strike vote result, she declined, stating that the result would not be announced until ratification by the New York officts. The judges' report and the ballots were being prepared tonight to be sent to New York.

Union headquartres also declined to announce the number of votes cast. The union claims a membership of about 4,000 and indications have pointed to a majority vote for the strike.

Police Hurt by Spanish Strikers.

Castellon, Spain, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Three policemen and several strikers were slightly injured today in the dispersion of a demonstration by striking members of the plasterers' union. The strikers refused to disband, and the police charged.

ZONING REGULATIONS AMENDED IN COUNTY

Prince Georges Ordinance Changed to Stand Up in Court Suits.

OCTOBER JURORS NAMED

Zoning regulations that will stand up in court is the aim of the amended zoning ordinance adopted by the Prince eGorges County commissioners. Following a decision by the United States Supreme Court that it is unconstitutional to require the signatures and consent of property owners in the neighborhood of an area for which rezoning is contemplated, the county commissioners were informed by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission that the consent clause in the county law probably would be held invalid if contested in court.

A new ordinance embodying such amendments as were considered necessary to safeguard the property owners of the county and at the same time hold valid in court was prepared by J. Bond Smith, general counsel for the Park and Planning Commission, and Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the commission, who is considered an expert on zoning laws. These two and Irvin Owings, of Prince eGorges County, chairman of the commission, then proposed the amendments to the whole commission, which accepted them. Mr. Owings and Mr. Root appeared for the commission at the public hearing which was held Tuesday at Upper Marlboro by the county commissioners, at which no opposition developed to the changes. They must be published in county newspapers 30 days prior to the time they become effective.

The consent clause was rewritten so as not to require consent of adjacent property owners and the items requiring consent in the old ordinance were embodied in a new clause which requires the special permit of the county commissioners after a public hearing and due publication.

Included in the items which require a special permit in the residential "A" area are: Aviation field, cemetery, children's home, private club, foundling home, golf course, miniature or by any other name, hospital, orphanage, railway passenger station, riding academy, rock quarry sanitarium, private school and tourist camp.

In the "C" residential area, which is the zone in which apartment houses are allowed, there were other changes. The existing height limit of six stories was abolished and provision made that apartments may be built to any htight compatible with safety, provided proper setbacks and yard space is provided. In "D" commercial zones, the businesses which require a special permit are: Barbecues, laundaries and automobile repair garages.

No nuisance industry can be erected or maintained in the "E" industrial zone, in which is classed the ordinary business, except by special permit.

With the adoption of the new ordinance, park and planning and county commissioners believe that proper safeguards have been erected for the county's homes and businesses which at the same time will stand the test of court action.

In preparation for the October term of Prince Georges County circuit court, Judge Joseph C. Mattingly has drawn the names of 73 residents of the county who will serve as the personnel of the grand and petit juries. The first 48 persons selected are to report October 6 at 10 o'clock in the morning to serve as members of the county grand jury and as the first week's petit jury.

The second list of 25 is to report October 13 at the same hour for the second week's petit jury. The names of those summoned have been given to Sheriff Charles S. Early for service.

Those chosen for the first panel are: Lemuel L. Gray, foreman; Richard C. Stello, William T. Casey, Allen T. Perrie, G. Oden Wickham, Gus A. Smith, Jade Allen, Walter S. Young, Moon C. Walls, Henry M. Scott, Daniel West, George N. Cox, John O. Bean, Edward K. McLane, Herbert M. Hardy, William D. Porter, Alexander Gude, Milton O. Watkins, Frank P. Babcock, Alfred D. Harvey, John E. The wife, through Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, tells the court that while s he was confined to the hospital and on the night their baby was born, the husuband came to the hospital waving a bottle of liquuor and drank its contents before her. She charges that he threatened her life on several occasions and that he struck her two weeks before the birth of the child.

$27,132 Low Bid For Grading Work

W. F. Brenizer Makes Offer for Job no Arlington Bridge Project.

Bids for the grading of the Virginia approaches to the new Arlington Memorial Bridge were opened yesterday. About a dozen bids were submitted, from firms in Baltimore, Norfolk, Dayton, Ohio, and Washington.

A local firm, the Warren F. Brenizer Co., bid $27,132, the lowest figure. OtOhOer estimates of the cost of the work ran as high as $57,810.

The work calls for the excavation of a roadway from the Virginia side of the bridge to the Arlington National Cemetery. Excavation is necessary to give an easy grade to the gates of the cemetery.

'Mother' Jones Better; Talks With Friends

Mary "Mother" Jones, noted 100-year-old labor leader, yesterday showed a decided gain and her condition was said to be much improved. Mother Jones has been severely ill for two weeks and physicians had about given up hope for her life.

For the last two days she had been in a comatose state, but yesterday began to show marked improvement. Whereas she had been unable to remember events in her tempestuous career, yesterday she was recovered sufficiently to carry on a connected conversation. Hope for her recovery was strengthened by the rally, but it was pointed out that it might be temporary, as her age makes definite diagnosis impossible.

TARIFF AND HOOVER G.O.P. BATTLE CRY

Wood Appeals for Two More Years to Carry Out 1928 Promises.

DRY ISSUE IS MINIMIZED

Chicago, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Notice was given tonight by Representative Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, that the battle-cry of his party in the campaign for the November elections will be the tariff bill and "whether or not we shall sustain President Hoover."

The tariff and President Hoover were described as "the real party issues" of the congressional campaign in an address by Wood over the Columbia Broadcasting System, which opened the Republican campaign for the November elections.

"There are collateral issues in this campaign as there are in every campaign," he added. "In some localities the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act is being agitated. These collateral questions are not questions between the parties. In some spots Democrats are dry and in other spots sopping wet. This, likewise, is true of Republicans."

Wood said election of a Democratic House of Representatives "would mean that the hands of the President would be tied, that he would be harassed at every turn, that disorder would ensue."

"Let us hope we may avoid this possible calamity," he continued. "My appeal to you is to vote for Republican candidates for Congress, support the President, give him a chance to sustain the protective tariff principle and avoid destructive foreign competition which would surely come with Democratic success."

Wood asserted that Mr. Hoover today is the "same man of courage, devotion and success that he was in 1928 when he was elected President of the United States."

"The Republican platform pledges of 1928," he added, "have been very largely carried out. Every effort has been made to fulfill party promises. President Hoover is entitled, under all the rules of the game, to be supported in 1930 with a Republican Congress so that he may have a fair chance to carry on and complete the fulfillment of pledges made two years ago."

The tariff, Wood said, "is to the prosperity of our Government what bread and butter is to the average household—a real necessity." He added that lowering the tariff "always causes American labor, American industry and the American farmer to compete with foreign countries and always creates unemployment."

"These same Democratic leaders who now rejoice because of some unemployment in this country," he continued, "are themselves largely responsible for this condition, because of their attitude in holding up and delaying the passage of the last tariff bill for more than a year."

200 FIDAC MEMBERS CONVENE IN CAPITAL

Soldiers of all the countries represented by the conference.

"Fidac's ideals are almost the same as those embodied in the American Constitution," Col. Brown said in his address. "It is the fruit of centuries of life and of thought in the Old World and the New; and now the Constitution sends back from the New World to the Old the physical force and political philosophy which, we believe, will help all mankind.

"The Tombs of the Unknown Soldiers all speak a universal language," he declared, "the brotherhood of man."

The dinner given by Gen. Pershing last night climaxed a day of activities which began with the arrival of the delegates at Union Station early yesterday morning. They were met by the United States Army Band and Bugle and Drum Corps from both the Victory and the Costello Posts of the American Legion.

An official Legion committee met the delegation at the station, where they were taken to the presidential waiting room and shortly after paraded down historic Pennsylvania avenue to their respective headquarters at the Willard and the Carlton Hotels.

Following a brief respite for breakfast, the delegates, headed by Maj. Julius I. Peyser, of Washington, American vice president of Fidac, and Capt. Paul J. McGahan, District departmental commander of the American Legion, the visitors were taken to Arlington National Cemetery, where they paid their respects to the Unknown Soldier of America.

On the way to the cemetery they were escorted by a color guard of soldiers, sailors and Marines, and at Key Bridge this guard of honor was met by a troop of the Third United States Cavalry from Fort Myer. At the cemetery gate this guard was further strengthened by Third Cavalry Band, Troop E and Batteries B and C of the Sixteenth Field Artillery, Maj. George commanding.

In solemn dignity the procession continued to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where, with appropriate ceremony, wreaths were placed on the beautiful white marble cenotaph. The Fidac Gold Medal of Recognition was also placed there. At the same time the Minister of Portugal, Viscount d'Alte, placed upon it the Portuguese Croix de Guerre.

Following the ceremonies at Arlington, the delegates were guests at the embassies and legations, and during the afternoon the welcoming session was held in the Memorial Continental Hall, where Commissioner Hubert B. Crosby, in behalf of the District of Columbia, welcomed the delegates to the city.

Addresses of welcome were also delivered by Maj. O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander of the American Legion; Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Donald Macrae, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Yesterday's session was the fourth held in America during this conference, three days having been spent in New York before coming to Washington. The countries represented include France, Great Britain, Italy, Portugal, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Jugoslavia, Poland and the United States.

Commander Ernest Lee Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, will address the conference at this morning's session, following a few minutes of business discussion, beginnng at 9 o'clock. A stag luncheon will be held at the Mayflower Hotel at 1 o'clock, and in the afternoon the delegates will be taken for a tour of Washington and for a trip to Mount Vernon.

At 4:15 o'clock this afternoon the delegates will be the guests of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Virginia, at a tea at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

Gov. Pollard of Virginia and his daughter, Miss Suzanne Pollard, official hostess at the Executive Mansion in Richmond, will come to Alexandria to welcome the visitors at the tea, accompanied by Col. John A. Cutchins, a member of the governor's staff.

Climaxing today's program of events, the Secretry of War, Patrick J. Hurley, will give a dinner for the foreign visitors tonight at 8:30 at the Congressional Country Club. Speakers, in addition to the Secretary of War, will include Dr. Thomas H. Healy and Lady Edward Spencer Churchill, a member of the British delegation.

This is the second conference of Fidac to be held in the United States since the organization was first placed on an international basis. Eight years ago the conference met in New Orleans.

BATTLE ON RASKOB FAVORS DEMOCRATS

MUD FLYING ONCE MORE

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

As some of the Republican influences are wondering whether they had not better drop their Raskob issue, the Democrats are moving to bring the matter to a head.

Already it has attained the bombshell proportions of the famous Caldwell letter in the 1928 campaign, and is causing as much bitterness as Mrs. Mabel Walker Wildebrandt's celebrated Ohio speech to the clergy.

Republican influences who do not want to go through such mudslinging as they went through in 1928 are looking around with a view to the origin of the issue. It first became noticable here in the statements prepared by James L. West, director of Republican publicity, but has now spread even to the statements issued by Majority Leader Tilson, chairman of the Eastern headquarters of the Republican congressional campaign.

In Kentucky, Senator Robsion, making an uphill fight to return to the Senate, is making Mr. Raskob his principal issue. A speech he made a few nights ago could easily have been taken for one made by Bishop Cannon in the 1928 campaign or those made by the anti-Smith candidates in Virginia and North Carolina in their subsequent fights on John Garland Pollard and in behalf of Senator Simmons. The difference is that Senator Robsion did not base his complaint on Mr. Raskob's wetness.

Indeed, his complaint was just Mr. Raskob. It is the lack of the availability of the wet issue against Mr. Raskob this year that is making the attack upon him embarrassing to some Republicans.

In Indiana, Senator Robinson, the best mudslinger of them all, has a variation to the tune. He is accusing Mr. Raskob of being responsible for the Wall street crash.

He is the only one, however, who is known to be justifying his attack on the Democratic chairman. The others simply shout Raskob and let it go at that.

A plan the Democrats have in mind to bring things to a showdown is to address a questionnaire to Majority Leader Tilson asking him just what are his grievances against Mr. Raskob; why, when he issues a statement, he refers to it as the Raskob national committee or the Raskob publicity bureau.

Is it because Raskob is a wet? Mr. Tilson would, of course, make haste to deny this, because he is wet himself. In fact, prohibition has so cut across party lines that the very dry Senator Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee, has formally announced that it is not an issue.

Then if it is not Mr. Raskob's wetness, just what is it that makes Mr. Tilson consider the use of his name so effective?

Is it his big business connections? The Republicans would hardly attack a man because of this, the Democratic leaders believe.

Then if it is neither of these, the questionnaire would demand just what is the political fire in Mr. Raskob's name.

In the meantime, the Democrats after a re-survey of the situation when it had become apparent that Mr. Raskob was being made a big issue, are seemingly concerned only about Kentucky. Everywhere else they believe it will react in their favor. As a means of dealing with the situation in Kentucky they are understood to be forwarding a collection of the data and campaign literature that figured in the whispering campaign of 1928 and which is now gathered in New York.

In view of what happened in Virginia and North Carolina when efforts were made to keep the 1928 bitterness alive, Democratic leaders are hopeful that the same revulsion of feeling will express itself in Kentucky. But one can never tell.

The development of the Raskob issue is proving particularly embarrassing for James Francis Burke, Republican general counsel, who once again has laid aside his private practice in Pittsburgh to be on the job at headquarters in a campaign.

Mrs. Willebrandt publicly accused him many months ago of having been responsible for, and of having edited, her Ohio speech. Mr. Burke hastily denied the charge, pointing out that he, himself, was a Catholic and of course, would not stand idly by and see political capital made of his church.

What the Democrats fear is that before they can have a show-down the Republicans generally will adopt Senator Robinson's justification for the play on the Raskob name which regardless of how ridiculous it might appear to some is perhaps, nevertheless legitimate in politics, and makes it difficult to get at the underlying purpose.

Guard Shot in Jail Riot Critically Ill

Five Maryland Convicts Turn State's Evidence; "Goats," They Say.

Baltimore, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Arthur F. Owen, Maryland penitentiary guard, shot in the attempt of nine prisoners to escape over the walls late Tuesday, was reported to be in a critical condition today and five of the nine convicts turned State's evidence.

Should Owen die, murder charges would immediately be filed against all, State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Connor said. He went before the grand jury, but it was indicated that no indictments would be asked pending the outcome of Owen's injuries.

The man who fired the shot, according to Owen and two other guards, was Rawlings V. Whittemore, 26, who was serving 21 years for robbery. Whittemore's brother was hanged in 1926 for killing a guard in trying to escape from the same prison and two years ago two other convicts were hanged under similar circumstances.

The five who turned State's evidence today told officials that Whittemore and three others who were cornered by guards and police in the laundry after the attempt to scale the wall failed, "made us the goats." The five said they were exposed to the fire of the guards while the other four tried to use the rope ladder.

SUGAR GROUP SEEKS AID OF FARM BOARD

HIGHER TARIFF SOUGHT

(Associated Press.)

The "sympathetic and moral support" of the Federal Farm Board to efforts toward securing a higher tariff on sugar or abolition of the present Cuban tariff preferential was requested yesterday by the sugar beet and sugar cane advisory committee.

The committee recommended that the board give immediate consideration to the problem of financing the 1931 crop, "to the end that aid may be rendered at the earliest practicable date," and to authorize a centralized marketing agency.

In all history, the report set forth, "there never has been so serious a depression in sugar prices."

Cuba Overproduction Cited.

"This is not the fault of the domestic producers," it continued, "but rather is due to the tremendous overproduction in other countries, especially Cuba. Prices have been beaten down to such a level that enormous losses have been sustained by nearly every sugar company in the United States."

Regarding competition of duty-free Philippine sugar, the committee said, "In just what form aid from the Federal Farm Board in solution of this problem could be rendered we are unable to state at the present time."

"However," the report added, "we are confident that you are fully cognizant of the ever-increasing menace from this source, not only to the domestic sugar industry, but to other American crops which are compelled to compete with the products of these far-away islands which are not, and never will be, an integral part of the United States."

Consider Shipping Problems.

Another problem arose, they said, from "the use of Government-owned and subsidized barge lines in shipping foreign sugar to interior points at much lower freight rates than are available to domestic beet and those cane producers who are compelled to ship by rail." Here the committee referred to shipments from Cuba to New Orleans, where it is refined, thence transported by barge line to Mississippi River points.

More than two-thirds of the Nation's consumption of sugar, the committee reported, is supplied by foreign countries, with Cuba furnishing more than 50 per cent.

Mrs. Hoover and Allan, who is to return to his studies at Harvard next week, plan to go to the camp today. The President is to motor down early tomorrow, accompanied by guests.

OFFICIAL PROTESTS OFFER TO TEACHER

LETTER IS SENT KRAMER

Formal protest against the ratification of a teaching contract in Washington schools with a Prince Georges County teacher still under contract has been filed with the Washington Board of Education by Superintendent of Schools Nicholas Orem, of Prince Georges County.

Superintendent Orem contends that the situation has arisen too often whereby county school teachers have been offered positions at higher pay in Washington schools and have quit their county jobs on little or no notice, to the detriment of the school syatem. He says that he does not blame the teachers for wanting more pay, but that he believes the sanctity of the teaching contract should be upheld by the Washington authorities as well as by the teachers themselves.

Present Case Cited.

In the case at question, the teacher was given a contract last year with the understanding that she was not far enough advanced on the Washington appointment list to receive an appointment this year and with the understanding that she had no intention of leaving the county system to accept a position in Washington, Mr. Orem said.

Last Saturday the teacher appeared at the school board offices in Upper Marlboro and told Mr. Orem that she had been offered a position at an advance in salary by Washington school officials. Mr. Orem told her that the county board would release her from her contract if and when a substitute could be secured. He then called Assistant Superintendent of Schools Stephen Kramer in Washington. Mr. Kramer told him that the teacher would not have to leave her position in the county until a substitute could be obtained.

The teacher late Wednesday informed the county superintendent that she had been ordered to report for duty at a teachers' meeting in Washington today and that she would not be at work Friday.

Teacher Held to Contract.

Mr. Orem then informed the teacher that she would be held to her contract until a substitute could be obtained, and that he would write to the Washington Board objecting to her appointment on ethical grounds inasmuch as she still was under contract with the county school system.

A formal protest has been forwarded by Mr. Orem and probably will be acted upon by the next meeting of the Washington Board of Education.

In the past, teachers have done the same thing, Mr. Orem said, on a number of occasions, but no drastic action has been taken by the board of education prior to this time. He intends in the future to insist on the sanctity of the teaching contract and believes the county board will agree with him.

NEW U. S. MINISTER TO LIBERIA CHOSEN

C. E. Mitchell, Capital Man, Named by Hoover for Diplomatic Post.

ACTIVE IN G. O. P. WORK

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday appointed Charles E. Mitchell, Negro, of Institute, W. Va., as minister to Liberia. The appointee is business manager of the West Virginia State College for Negroes.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Charles E. Mitchell, Negro, business manager of West Virginia State College, at Institute, near here, who was appointed minister to Liberia by President Hoover today, has been active in Negro educational and political circles for several years.

He has been connected with the college for 26 years and business manager 20 years. In recent presidential campaigns he served as director or assistant director of Negro activities of the Republican party, with headquarters in New York. He also is a former member of the West Virginia Republican State executive committee.

Charles E. Mitchell, newly appointed envoy to Liberia, has been a resident of the District of Columbia during the last three years, living at 1806 New Hampshire avenue. He is regarded as one of the wealthiest Negroes in America, having accumulated his fortune in real estate. Failure of Congress to increase the salary of the Liberian envoy from $5,000 to $10,000 made the selection of a man of independent means for that post necessary.

The new envoy, who has managed the colored end of Republican politics in West Virginia for 20 years, was in charge of New York headquarters of the colored division of the Republican national committee in 1924 and was one of the secretaries of this division in the campaign of 1928. His appointment gives West Virginia more national recognition among Negro voters than any other State, the recorder of deeds, Arthur G. Froe, being a resident of that State also.

Danville Tobacco Sales Start September 30

Danville, Va., Sept. 18.—The Danville tobacco market will open on September 30 with only three sets of buyers instead of the customary four. This was decided at a meeting of the sales committee of the Danville Tobacco Association at which plans for the opening of the market were discussed. However, it was stated that a fourth set of buyers would be added soon after the opening.

The crop this year is expected generally to fall far below that of last year in both quantity and quality because of the drought.

STOREKEEPER DIES OF THROAT WOUNDS

Police Doubt Story Told by Owings, Md., Man of Bandit Attack.

SUICIDE MOTIVE SOUGHT

Special to The Washington Post.

Prince Frederick, Md., Sept. 18.—Victim of knife wounds inflicted by a bandit trio or, as police believe, self-inflicted, Benjamin H. Lyons, 53-year-old Calvert County merchant, died in a hospital here early this morning after narrating a tale of holdup and robbery.

Widely known throughout this region as proprietor of a store at Owings and because of his tremendous physique, Lyons was severely slashed across the throat early Tuesday morning in his store, where he went ostensibly to attend to several matters before driving to Baltimore with a friend, Rufus D. Harrison.

Entering the store a short time later, Harrison found Lyons lying unconscious in a pool of blood behind the counter. Brought to the Calvert County Hospital, Lyons described how three men suddenly attacked him in the store, robbed him and cut his throat. Around his neck was found a sash cord.

Although admitting that they have no motive for suicide, county authorities have launched an investigation on that theory. They pointed out that no signs of a struggle in the store were visible, that no fingerprints have been found, and that of $350 believed to have been stolen, $300 had been deposited in the Owings Bank the previous day.

one dissenting vote, that of Councilman Edmund F. Ticer.

Mr. Ticer introduced a resolution to submit the proposition to the qualified voters of Alexandria, and cited chapter 200 of the acts of the General Assembly of Virginia in 1930, which granted permission to the city council to submit the proposition to a vote if this was considered advisable. This act was not mandatory, however, and authority was still vested in the council to accept an advantageous bid. The former council passed unanimously a resolution to request this action of the General Assembly, and it was thought at the time that the council was morally bound to call for a referendum vote at the next general election, November 4. The council as at present constituted, however, does not consider itself so bound. Mr. Ticer's resolution was lost for want of a second.

Mr. Lamond then introduced a resolution to accept the bid of the Seaboard Investment Trust for purchase of the property and for the 30-year franchise, which was adopted. It is understood that another meeting of the council will be held, probably Monday, to decide upon the effective date of the sale, and to draw up the franchise. The date of taking over the plant will be decided after a conference with teh purchasers.

moral support of Campbell. Follow-Me Post, the youngest post in the District, yesterday directed a letter of confidence to Federal Post, of which Campbell is a member.

Herbert S. Ward, associate defense counsel, said that the letter contained a check to assist in Campbell's defense. It also expressed sympathy to Campbell and his family and confidence in his innocence. It was signed by Phillip R. Belt, adjutant of Follow-Me Post.

Chief Defense Counsel Charles Henry Smith has indicated that he was attacking the validity of the indictment, which alleges that Campbell committed the crime. Should Campbell be released by Federal Judge D. Lawrence Groner at the removal hearing tomorro win Alexandria, the accused had declared his intention of surrendering to District authorities and demanding trial.

CARD OF THANKS.

LOEB—To friends who manifested their kind sympathy and solicitude in the sad bereavement we have sustained recently through the death of our beloved wife and mother, the late MRS. GERTRUDE LOEB; to those who personally attended the funeral rites; to those who sent messages of condolence, who offered tributes by word or pen; to the rabbis of Washington; to the Ohev Sholom congregation and all the local Jewish congregations, the District of Columbia branch of the American War Mothers, Victory Unit, No. 4, American Legion Auxiliary, and the Costello Post of the American Legion; to the various Hebrew lodges and benevolent societies, communal and social organizations; to all of them we extend our heartfelt gratitude and appreciation, with our sincerest best wishes for a Happy New Year. May this coming year be exempt from sorrow and bring on a long period of tranquility and peace. May the merciful Lord bestow His divine consolation upon all those who mourn the loss of loved ones, amid all of them who mourn for Zion and pray for its redemption. May the incoming year be the harbinger of glad tidings for Israel and all the world—as is the sincere wish of

BRIDE SEES GAIN BY DRYS IN SENATE

HOUSE DECLARED "SAFE"

(Associated Press.)

An increase in the number of prohibition supporters in the next Senate was forecast last night by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Antisaloon League, "if the drys show normal fighting trim" in the forthcoming election. Mr. McBride said in a statement on the recent primaries that the present Senate is estimated to be more than 3-to-1 dry, and that gains in the primary have been sufficient to more than offset any possible losses in the Upper House in the election.

"The House, in which some seven or eight drys have been defeated by the terrific campaign of the wets in the recent primary," he added, "will still stand more than 70 per cent dry.

"The results in the House have not been so conclusive, however. The few losses there, caused by the tremendous campaign of the wets, as well as other issues, can in some measure be offset in the election.

"The wets have forced the issue in this campaign. It is a poor year for a wobbler. The issue is more clearly drawn than at any time since the coming of prohibition."

Mr. McBride said that the "wild claims of the leaders of the wet associations, who are out to make a showing, are misleading." He said that the wets recently had claimed 29 new supporters for prohibition repeal, adding that "twenty of these have been for modification or some substitute for prohibition all the time" and that of the remaining nine "a majority had never been counted in the dry estimate."

"Claims of the wets and the determination of the wet forces, as shown in this primary," Mr. McBride asserted, "challenge the drys in the November election. They accept the issue."

U. S. MOVES TO END OLD RIGHTS IN CHINA

BASIS OF NEGOTIATIONS

The question of the United States giving up its extraterritorial jurisdiction in China—that is abandoning the system whereby Americans in China are tried in courts of American jurisdiction—came to the forefront again yesterday.

The State Department announced that it had prepared a set of draft proposals looking to the gradual relinquishment of extraterritorial rights in China, and that these would be used as a basis for conversations between representatives of the two governments.

These conversations, which were begun in 1928, will be renewed and the draft proposals submitted when Dr. C. C. Wu, the Chinese Minister to Washington, returns here from Geneva next month.

Studied by Commission.

The proposals which the State Department referred to yesterday are believed to follow in general the recommendations of the international commission which made a study of the question of extraterrioriality in 1926. This commission, which was created in pursuance to a resolution adopted at the Washington conference, was headed by Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago, and was composed of the representatives of thirteen nations.

The report of the Strawn commission recommended that China enact a comprehensive and modern code of law, and that it establish modern courts for the interpretation of those laws. And it recommended abolition of the old-style prisons and detention houses and the substitution therefor of modern institutions.

At the same time the report recommended that the nations which enjoy extraterritorial rights in China should on their part correct certain abuses which have arisen through those rights.

China, though it was a civilized nation when Europe was in the bronze age, began to grant extraterritorial rights as far back as 1689, the first nation to be so favored being Russia. Now Russia has agreed to relinquish its rights, and so have Mexico, Chile, Bolivia, Italy, Belgium, Spain and Denmark. Germany and Austria lost their extraterritorial rights under the Versailles Treaty.

Proposals by Britain.

Great Britain appears to be a jump ahead of the United States in the present negotiations, her representative at Nanking having presented a set of draft proposals to the Chinese government on September 11.

The United States, which entered into a treaty with China in 1844 giving it extraterritorial rights, promised China in the American-Chinese treaty of 1903 that it would be prepared to relinquish those rights "when satisfied that the state of the Chinese laws, the arrangements for their administration and other considerations warrant it in so doing."

In a series of notes in the last two years, the Chinese government has assured this country that it was making rapid progress in establishing a system of jurisprudence based on the principles of the Western World, and has appealed to it to abolish the "anachronism" of extraterritorality.

Whatever its view of the situation in China now, the American Government was by no means ready to answer that appeal a year ago. In a note to the Nationalist government in August, 1930, the State Department declared that, while the United States was anxious to relinquish its extraterritorial rights as soon as possible, it was not yet satisfied that the Chinese courts were capable of doing justice between Chinese and foreign litigants.

Martinsburg Merger Of Banks Called Off

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 18.—Negotiations for the merger of Citizens National Bank and Merchants & Farmers Bank here, two of the four financial institutions of this city, were declared officially indefinitely postponed today. The negotiations approached success last winter when original announcement was made, with projected list of officers and an adopted name for the joint institution.

Business depressions, felt locally and the drought which has helped make the economic situation heavy, were announced as the reasons for the postponement.

LOAN SHARK NAMES TO BE GIVEN BRIDE

MORE LETTERS RECEIVED

With death staring me in the face, what could I do but borrow, and having borrowed, and being without means after my illness to meet my payments, what was there left for me to do but borrow more? What is the answer?"

Then there is the case of a man working on a moderate salary who, having married the girl of his dreams, saved up enough to invest in a small used automobile so that he and his wife could spend their Sunday afternoons out in the open air, swimming at the beaches or picnicking in the woods.

When the stock market flopped, his employer went bankrupt and he lost his job. Others, too, were looking for work, and he found it impossible to get another job for many weeks. At last, however, he managed to land a position which, while it paid him less than the one he had lost, nevertheless it was a job.

Forced to Borrow.

But in the meanwhile his slender savings had vanished, and he found himself in debt. In order to pay several small debts and consolidate all his indebtedness into one account, he took the title to his car to a loan shark and borrowed $100, giving the customary note for $140, payable in twenty weeks.

After he had made eighteen payments and was almost out of debt, owing only $14 more, his employer sent him out of town on a job. By the time he returned to Washington several days later, his installment on the note was four days past due. On the fifth day, the loan shark confiscated his automobile, which had a market value of $300, and he is still trying to recover it.

Still another is a Government clerk with eleven children. Here, in part, is what he has to say:

"I have had to borrow to pay doctor bills and the numerous other bills that a poor man has to contend with. Several years ago my health gave way, and I was told to leave for another climate at once. I did not have a dollar, nor could I get money from many that I knew who were well able to assist me. Being a member of different fraternities I did manage to get carfare, but my salray was cut off at once and I had to borrow before I could get away.

"I had borrowed on several occasions before from these same loan sharks, and while I was away a payment fell due. I wrote and asked for just one month's grace in making a payment of only $6.25, offering to pay a penalty for default, but I received word that such could not b done and that I must pay as per contract. Just lately I was forced to renew my loan with these people, and I had paid in $80 on a loan of $185. When I received the amount allowed it was only $59.20, although I had paid $80 of the original amount asked."

Letters Are Alike in Tenor.

And so they go, these letters from borrowers who are being victimized by usurious loan sharks. Most of them are really pathetic in the tragedies they reveal of poorly paid workers struggling to make both ends meet, to bring up and educate their families and to pay off outrageously exorbitant charges for debts they contracted when the pressure of unexpected expenses made it seem that there was no way out except to borrow from a loan shark.

But, although the usury laws of the District may not be perfect, they nevertheless are comprehensive enough to protect the honest borrower from the oppression of the loan shark. In this series tomorrow there will be given an analysis of the law which will point out to the layman just what rights he has in the matter of borrowing money.

Most borrowers who deal with loan sharks, The Post's investigation has revealed, are not informed as to the law, largely for the reason that they are not in position to read and analyze the law for theselves and are not acquainted with anyone who could explain it to them.

Utility Seeks Priority In West Virginia Plan

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 18.—South Branch Power Co. of West Virginia, having its main office in Philadelphia, Pa., has made application to the Federal Power Commission for preliminary permit in order to secure and maintain priority while perfecting data necessary to make application for license for water power development of Great Cacapon and South Branch of Potomac River, adjacent to this city.

This would affect lands in Morgantown, Hampshire, Grant and Hardy Counties, W. Va. For several years War Department engineers as well as representatives of hydroelectric interests have conducted extensive surveys and investigation to the headwaters of these streams.

TRADE BODY FAVORS NEW GAS SCHEDULE

Chamber of Commerce Asks Approval of Rates Before Hearing.

CITIZENS GIVE VIEWS

Favorable consideration of the new gas rate schedule submitted by the Washington Gas Light Co., was asked of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by Charles W. Darr, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's indorsement of the proposed rate schedule was set forth in a letter from Mr. Darr which was read into the record of the second day of the public hearing conducted on the new rates.

Not only should the commission give favorable consideration to the proposed gas rates, but it should not postpone action on the pending schedule because of any question of valuation, Mr. Darr said. This late statement was aimed at the effort of William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, to have the question of valuation of gas properties decided before the question of new rates is passed upon. Mr. Clayton's motions for a new valuation and dismissal of the pending rate case were denied by the Utilities Commission when they were made on the first day of the hearing.

Clayton Submits Resolution.

Mr. Clayton submitted yesterday a resolution from the citizens indorsing the new rate schedule in principle but asking the commission to readjust the schedules proposed by the company so that the small consumer would not have his gas bills increased each month as will be done if the company schedule is approved as submitted. By small consumer is meant consumers who use less than 2,200 cubic feet of gas a month.

John L. Schick, assistant controller of the gas company, was the first witness when the hearing was resumed at 10 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Schick submitted several analyses of the monthly bills of gas consumers, the burden of which was to show that apartment house dwellers were practically the only ones who would be hurt by the proposed rates.

Rufus S. Lusk, president of a statistics corporation, and an officer of the Operative Builders Association, was the next witness. Mr. Lusk was introduced by the company as an expert to tell of the apartment house development of the city. Washington has proportionately more apartment house dwellers than other cities except Los Angeles, New York and Chicago, Mr. Lusk said.

Lusk Describes Development.

Mr. Lusk described the apartment house development of the city and the type of apartments in use, and said that the majority of persons living in one room, kitchenette and bath apartments have a higher total income than have persons living in homes. These figures were presented, of course, to show that the persons whose bills would be increased under the pending rate schedule are better able to stand the increase than are those whose bills will be left unchanged or be lowered.

Ernest L. Gibbs, of the Conduit Road Citizens Association, asked the commission to revise the company schedule so that there will be no increase in the bills of the small consumers of gas.

Byers McK. Bachman, chief statistician of the commission, took exception to some of the company calculations. Among other things, Mr. Bachman said, that according to his figures the proposed rates would cut the company revenues from domestic consumers by $197,763 instead of $225,000, as had been estimated by the company. He also said that the proper amount to allow for fixed charges per meter would be 30 cents a month rather than 79 cents.

Bert H. Peck, chief engineer of the commission, also was a witness. Mr. Peck presented several alternative gas schedules which he had worked up.

Mains Enough for Present.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the commission, asked George A. G. Wood, president of the gas company, if the increased consumption of gas the company expected would necessitate large expenditures for new mains.

Mr. Wood said it had been estimated that existing facilities would handle the increased consumption anticipated in the course of the next two years.

Gen. Patrick asked about the high pressure which was being maintained on the mains of the Georgetown Gas Co. Mr. Wood said that an overpressure was necessary at present in order to get gas to a large number of consumers, but that company experts were studying that situation.

Gen. Patrick adjourned the hearing and the commission will take the rate schedule and the testimony of the hearing under study for action soon.

Parochial School Opening Planned

St. Augustine's Parish Has Plant Valued at $250,000.

With a record enrollment anticipated today and tomorrow, plans have been completed for the opening on Monday of the new $250,000 parochial school of St. Augustine's Parish on Fifteenth street northwest between R and S streets.

The school, modern in every respect, has twelve rooms with a capacity of 500 pupils and has an especially attractive kindergarten department which will accommodate nearly 50 children. Teaching will be conducted by the Oblate Sisters of Providence, under Mother Superior Luke as principal. The sisters will be housed in the new convent adjoining the school, and the two properties have a joint estimated value of $325,000.

The Rev. A. J. Olds, pastor of St. Augustine's, is responsible for erection of the new buildings, and he has been warmly felicitated by diocesan authorities for his labors.

AVIATRIX IS KILLED IN RECORD ATTEMPT

HELD SEVERAL RECORDS

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Ruth Alexander, noted aviatrix, died today in the crash of her low-wing light monoplane only a few minutes after her take-off from Lindbergh Field for Wichita, Kans., and New York, in search of a new speed record for her sex.

The cause of the accident could not be determined. The girl may have lost her bearings in the low early morning fog sweeping in from the ocean. Her plane was seen flying close to the ground after she had climbed 500 feet above the field. A moment later it ploughed into a hill 4 miles north of the airport.

Mrs. Alexander, who was 24 years old and who recently flew from Vancouver, B. C., to Agua Caliente, Lower California, in 16 hours, a record for women, left Agua Caliente Airport at 1 a. m., today and landed at Lindbergh Field here for a brief halt. The fog was blowing in from the sea, but the flier took off for Wichita at 3:28 a. m.

Her broken body was found in the shattered fuselage. Parts of the plane were scattered several hundred feet over the hillside.

The young aviatrix received a pilot's license only last year, although she had planned an air career for a decade, and had worked here in restaurants and beauty shops more than a year to get money to realize her ambition.

The day after she passed the Federation Aeronautique Internationale tests last November 17, she established a world's altitude record of 18,000 feet for women fliers in planes less than 100 horsepower.

Today's flight had been sponsored by the Chambers of Commerce of San Diego and Agua Caliente and sanctioned by the National Aeronautic Association. She had planned to tour the East and Middle West after reaching New York, and was to be met by her parents at Wichita on the eastward trip.

ANDREE EXPEDITION FINDS TO BE SHIPPED

Gunboat to Take Coffins to Swedish Capital for Further Work.

RELICS OWNED BY HEIRS

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Examination and preservation of the relics of the Andree polar balloon expedition were completed today by Swedish and Norwegian scientists here, and the relics will be shipped tomorrow to Stockholm.

The coffins of the three explorers, Salomon August Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel, will be taken aboard the Swedish gunboat Svenskund tomorrow afternoon. The gunboat will sail immediately for the Swedish capital.

Further work will probably be done there.

Stockholm, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—A committee of legal experts reported to the government today that all relics of the Andree polar expedition undoubtedly are the property of the heirs of the three dead explorers, in the absence of any specific instructions which may have been left behind by Salomon August Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel.

The committee advised that the claims of those who found the 33-year-old relics must be settled under Norwegian laws, which provide that articles found must be handed to the owner and the finder must be given a reasonable reward.

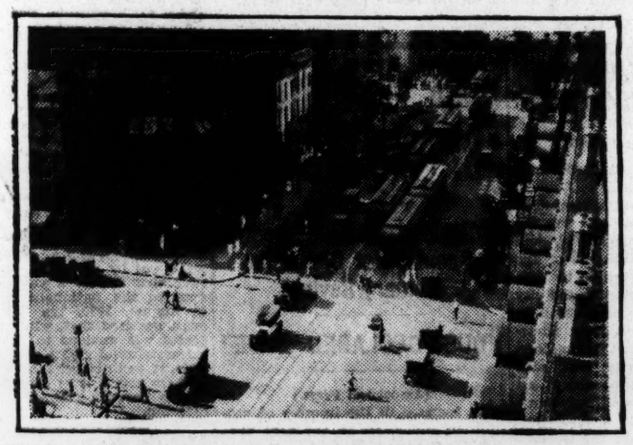
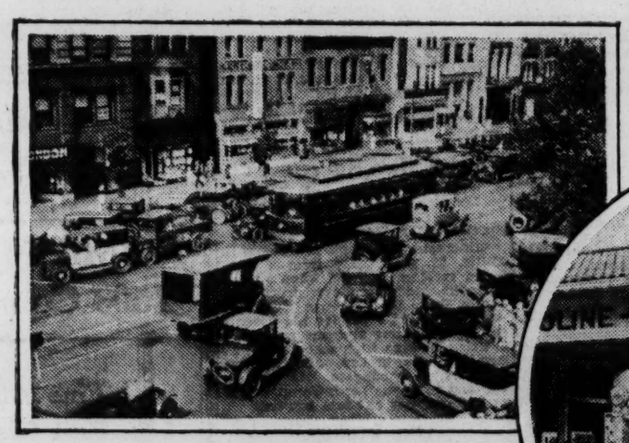
OF THIS FINER MOTOR FUEL



14th and F Streets, Washington, D.C. Use ESSO—and when the whistle blows, pick up faster—get by that car ahead—without a single knock.

Today's tangled traffic at 13th and F Streets demands the extra, knockless power that ESSO gives.



A recent traffic check showed that one out of every 5 cars that round this corner at 17th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue is powered by ESSO.

One of the reasons that ESSO is the most powerful motor fuel sold in Washington is that it does not knock . . . "A fuel that knocks in any particular engine gives less power and less miles per gallon than a similar fuel which does not."—Dr. H. C. Dickinson of the United States Bureau of Standards, in an article on "Anti-Knock" Gasolines, published this year in the United States Daily.

That's why we're so particular to have ESSO's special base stock low in knock rating. Then to that finer stock is added Ethyl fluid, the most effective anti-knock ingredient known to science.

No wonder ESSO gives more power—yet costs no more by the mile. No wonder that more Washington motorists are switching to the Giant Power Fuel every day. Fill up your car with ESSO today—there isn't a knock in a tankful.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY

All over Washington motorists will tell you that ESSO, selling at a 3-cent premium over regular gasolines, is more than worth its extra cost, for it eliminates knocks—and costs no more by the mile.

Typical of "Standard" Stations all over Washington is this clean, new station at 15th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. Drive to the nearest "Standard" dealer or service station today; say "ESSO—and fill it up"—then try to hear a knock!

RUMRUNNER GIVEN JOB THROUGH JONES

Senator Admits He Aided Alleged Gang Member to Get Dry Post.

HAYNES TALK RECALLED

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Senator Wesley L. Jones, advocate of prohibition, admitted in Federal Court here yesterday that though he had been told Alfred M. Hubbard was connected with the Roy Olmstead liquor-running gang he went to Prohibition Commissioner Haynes in 1925 to lay before him a request that Hubbard be appointed to the prohibition force.

The senator said he first had conversations with Roy C. Lyle, suspended prohibition administrator, and William W. Whitney, former legal adviser, who with two former dry agents are on trial, accused of having taken $100,000 in bribes.

"I can't say any advice was asked," he testified concerning the request that he see to Hubbard's appointment, "but I was asked if the appointment could be arranged. They told me Hubbard was connected with the Olmsted gang and asked if he could be made a special agent in order to get inside evidence.

Agrees to See Dry Head.

"They asked me if I would see Mr. Haynes, commissioner of prohibition, to see if Hubbard couldn't be appointed. They told me they thought Hubbard could be depended upon, but that any way it wouldn't do any harm. I told them I would see Mr. Haynes."

Senator Jones said that when he returned to Washington he saw the prohibition commissioner, told him what Lyle and Whitney wanted and "left it up to him."

"My recollection is that Haynes said at that time that Hubbard would be appointed," he added.

Under cross-examination the senator said he had no independent knowledge about Hubbard, but said, under direct examination by Defense Attorney A. R. Hilen, that he knew in general of the operations of the Olmsted gang.

Denies Getting $6,000.

Senator Jones, who appeared as a defense witness, added his denial to that of Lyle and Whitney that $6,000 was contributed by bootleggers to his (Jones') campaign in 1926.

Queried about testimony by Hubbard, star Government witness in the bribery trial, that Roy Olmsted and other liquor runners had been asked by the indicted prohibition officials to contribute to Jones campaign, the senator said:

"I certainly heard no suggestion of that sort. As a matter of fact, they would be the last people to contribute to my campaign. I remember Mr. Whitney came to me, and perhaps Lyle was with him, and told me he wanted to contribute to my campaign. I told him I was running on the Republican ticket and if they desired to make any contributions they could make it to the Republican State central committee."

Attorneys Are U. S. Witnesses.

Six attorneys, called as Government rebuttal witnesses, testified today that the "state-wide reputation" of the defendants in the case, as honest law-enforcing officers, was bad.

None of the witnesses was asked concerning the reputation of Roy C. Lyle, suspended prohibition administrator on trial. The three other defendants all were said by one or more Government witnesses to have bad reputations as officers.

of the Whig party before the Civil War.

"The disintegration of the Whig party in the slavery controversy is illustrative," he said. "That organization in the fifties found the slavery issue loaded with political, moral and emotional dynamite.

"The Whigs did not meet the logic of events. Guided by short-sighted expediency and timidity, they persisted in a policy of evasion. Because of this the party failed.

"Today the Republican party is confronted with a crisis not unlike that which the Whig party failed to meet. It is faced with the issue of prohibition. Although primarily a social and economic problem, it must now be dealt with by governmental action."

Woman Blames Rum In Suit for Divorce

Stating that her husband, John Irby Starnes, for years "a man of great earning capacity," began drinking excessively last January and neglecting his family obligations, Mrs. Evelyn Bekto Starnes, of Park Road northwest near Warder street, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to grant her a limited divorce.

In proof of her allegation, the wife charges that on one occasion her husband took their 9-year-old son into a speakeasy. Mrs. Starnes, in addition to the divorce, wants custody of the three children and adequate alimony.

PROHIBITION RATINGS ARE CHANGED

efficient young legal adviser, from being transferred.

Canfield Case Cited.

And that brings into the picture Palmer Canfield, the prize example of politics. He was prohibition director of New York State before the regime of Gen Andrews, and since then it has been his ambition to be administrator in the New York district. He formerly was mayor of Kingston, N. Y., and has strong political backing.

Shortly before I got my appointment in New York, Congress passed a bill which provided civil service eligibility for all employes in the Prohibition Bureau. I had been called before a civil service board for examination, and in May, 1927, the newspapers reported that Canfield had applied for examination.

Canfield, however, was not certified by the Civil Service Commission for the position of administrator. Later Senator Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, chairman of the Senate civil service committee, took an interest in Canfield and took his case before the commission. Canfield later was certified with a passing grade of 70 per cent. Later his percentage was set at 80, and there the matter rested until the presidential campaign.

Saw Job Slipping.

But, to get back to 1927. I didn't expect to keep my job long, for I had no political backing. A fortnight or so after I took the former prohibition administrator, with strong political backing, who won belated civil service rating.

New York office my legal adviser was summoned to Washington by Commissioner Doran.

The next day Alf Oftedal, the assistant commissioner, dropped into my office and asked how I liked it that Canfield was to be my legal adviser.

That was news to me, but I kept still. The next day O'Neill came back. He had received notice that he was transferred to Washington and that Canfield would take his place.

I telephoned Doran that I did not want Canfield, that I intended to have something to say about appointments in my office and that I could not dispense with O'Neill. Then I resolved to play a bit of politics myself and made an appointment with Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman, whom I never had met.

I told Hilles the bureau was trying to force Canfield on me and I didn't want him. Mr. Hilles told me he had twice refused to indorse Canfield for the post of administrator, though Assistant Secretary Lowman was very strong for him, and the administration had been willing to appoint him with the Hilles' O. K.

Lowman's Name Enters.

A few days later Dr. Doran was in New York and told me that Lowman had called him to the Treasury one day and that Canfield was there.

Lowman, said Doran, had insisted that something be done for Canfield in the way of a position, and they argued at length over how to do it, finally deciding to employ his legal talents in my office.

Dr. Doran insisted that it was Lowman, not he, who wanted Canfield; but I have several letters from the commissioner at this period, talking up the advantages of having Canfield to help me.

I was notified that Canfield would come to see me August 3. He did, and in the presence of Maj. H. H. White, a bureau official, he talked to me for three hours, during most of which time I just listened.

Both Lowman and Doran had promised him the job, he said, and Lowman had shaken hands on it. I told Canfield I did not want him in my office and if they had promised him the job to go back to Washington and tell them to give it to him. I wrote to Doran that I didn't want Canfield in my office in any capacity.

And that, strangely enough, was the last I heard of the matter.

Alleges Ouster Plot.

It had been plain enough to me that an effort was being made to put Canfield in as administrator, but that for some reason it had not seemed advisable to put him in after Maj. Mills. I knew that he was slated to succeed me and that if he came into my office I would be eased out in a month or so. If they wanted to replace me, they might do so; but they would have to be open and above board about it.

At any rate, reports constantly were coming in, disrupting the discipline of my staff, that I was soon to go; and that Canfield would be the next. New York politicians wanted him. And Dr. Doran told me that Senator Curtis was behind him. Curtis' interest in a New York appointment may seem far-fetched; but this was in May, 1928, when I was battling Curtis' campaign managers on permit matters in New York.

On December 10, 1928, I was thunderstruck to read in the daily papers that a new administrative district, No. 26, had been established with headquarters at Albany, taking in the counties north of Westchester and some of the western counties, with Palmer Canfield as administrator.

Talks With Hilles.

I talked with Mr. Hilles and he told me he had heard of a new district was being contemplated and that the only excuse he could find for it was to make a place for Canfield. Hilles said he could do nothing with Lowman and Undersecretary Ogden Mills.

Just recently, said Hilles, he had had an argument with Mills because the Undersecretary insisted on consolidating two revenue districts in New York on the plea of economy and efficiency.

It seemed strange to Hilles, in view of Mills' position with regard to revenue districts, that he would consent to the making of a new prohibition district, an exactly contrary policy.

And Doran had often told me that he would never sign Canfield's application as administrator. Afterward he told me he had done it to get Canfield out of his office and to please Senators Dale and Curtis.

The regime of Canfield is partly a matter of newspaper record. Within six months special investigators had been sent into his district to look into matters and close up breweries, and on June 26, 1929, Doran announced Canfield's transfer to the post of legal field supervisor of the Northeastern States.

Relates Brewery Scandal.

Among Canfield's acts was to issue a permit to a brewery in Hudson, N. Y., which I several times had refused to issue before the territory was given to Canfield. It was closed up, and with the trial of its conspirators last May came a story that Canfield had been present, a month before his appointment, in a room in the Hotel Roosevelt when $10,000 or $20,000 disappeared from a table.

The Federal grand jury in New York spent some weeks this summer investigating this story, heard Canfield and returned no indictment against him. Mr. Lowman announced that he considered this a vindication of Canfield. The papers said that Mr. Lowman never had taken the charge seriously. United States Attorney Tuttle announced that he was sending the grand jury minutes to Secretary Mellon, and that was the last to be heard of them.

Challenges Secretary Mellon.

I now challenge Tuttle or Mellon to make those minutes public. I take it that the evidence did not incriminate Canfield. But I am informed that there was very interestinig evidence about the politicians in Washington.

And coming down to a somewhat typical example of the way politics works in the lower ranks, there is the case of James Bruno, who is one of Representative La Guardia's lieutenants, a prime example of that militant wet's vigorous efforts to help enforce the Volstead act.

Bruno's photograph graces a page of a 311-page program which was got out on the occasion of an entertainment given by LaGuardia's own Eighteenth Assembly District Republican Club at the Palm Garden on February 24, 1927. The entire book consists of space sold to various individuals.

The advertisers included a large number of night clubs, speakeasies and restaurants I have raided from time to time, known violators of the prohibition law.

Listed as Dry Agent.

In the files seized at Luigi's restaurant at 134 West Houston street on June 28, 1928 (Luigi was one of the advertisers), Mr. Bruno appeared on one of the cards, rated as an internal revenue agent wth his address given at his Republican Club, and the notation "Personal Friend of Mr. Luigi."

In justice to Bruno it must be said that other agents and former agents were in this file with the same rating. There also were the names of some 300 police officers which I turned over to Commissioner Whalen.

Bruno's rating on the civil service examination was 37.36 per cent (70 is passing), which is one of the lowest that has come to my attention.

Then there is the matter of his efficiency. In the early days of my administration in order to check the efficiency of my agents and to eliminate "shake-downs" as much as possible I inaugurated a system whereby agents were permitted to work on nothing but written assignments. If an agent was found anywhere but where he was supposed to be he was in trouble. If an agent discovered another violation while on duty he had to telephone the office and be assigned to it before proceeding.

Under this system I checked Bruno's record from February 1, 1927, to February 15, 1930, and found that out of 348 complaints assigned he had made only 27 cases with 33 arrests. A 75 per cent average would have been about right.

Bruno Gets Consideration.

All in all, it did not seem that Bruno was a particularly efficient means of working out a noble experiment. As a World War veteran, however, he was retained in the service and allowed to take a second examination.

Early this year I received instructions from Washington to terminate the services of all veterans who had not passed the second examination. Bruno was among this number.

But under date of January 12, 1930, Commissioner Doran wrote me from Washington that Representative La Guardia wanted Bruno to have an executive job in my organization.

"Apparently Congressman La Guardia wants Bruno made a section chief," said the commissioner.

Big Drive for Bruno.

Thus began the big drive to save Bruno.

Under date of February 26, 1930, Representative La Guardia wrote me as follows:

"I desire to ascertain for my official use the record of James Bruno, as agent assigned in your office. I want to know particularly whether his services have been satisfactory; if he is a good agent, and if his continuation in the service, based on his record, is desirable."

Of course, I surmised that any favorable reply would be filed with the Civil Service Commission in an effort to have Bruno placed on the eligible list. You might think that a grade of 37.36 would make this out of the question. But you may also take it that La Guardia knows his Washington.

I replied on March 6 that I had already recommended that no effort be made to retain Bruno. The following Saturday Koenig came in to see me and seemed very much disturbed because of my letter to La Guardia. He said La Guardia wanted Bruno retained and had intended to use a letter of recommendation from me to see if he (La Guardia) could not persuade the Civil Service Commission to give Bruno a passing grade. Koenig tried very hard to get me to change my decision, but I refused.

Tells of Bruno Call.

The following Monday Bruno came to see me and when I refused to change my mind he quietly placed his badge and credentials on my desk. I had seen many men do this before. It is almost a customary bluff with those who consider their political backing all-powerful.

I told Bruno the proper thing was for him to resign. He refused to do it, as is also customary.

So I reported this to Doran with the recommendation that Bruno be dropped from the rolls.

Koenig came in to see me March 22, said Bruno had been too hasty and was sorry. He again tried to get me to give the recommendation asked for, since Bruno was a very necessary man to LaGuardia in his district. I told him it would be a good thing for prohibition if LaGuardia were defeated. Koenig finally got me to agree to meet him in Washington on my next visit there.

So we met in the commissioner's office on April 3, and Koenig told Doran and me that Bruno was at that moment before the Civil Service Commission trying to be certified. Koenig finally got us to say we would give Bruno consideration if he were passed by the commission. That meant nothing, as we promised no appointment, but it seemed to satisfy Koenig.

Ducked LaGuardia.

LaGuardia was announced at the commissioner's office while I was there that afternoon, and I ducked out another door. I did not want to see him. I have never met LaGuardia.

I announced my resignation on June 27. On Monday, June 30, my last day in office, Koenig called me on the telephone, talked very cordially, wanted to know if I would not reinstate Bruno. He pleaded very hard, but I refused.

Koenig asked me to see Bruno. I did, and told him I could do nothing for him.

Koenig called me again for a report on this interview and asked me if I had received a telegram from Washington about Bruno. I said I had not.

"Well, you will get a telegram," said Koenig.

However, no telegram came, and I retired from office without having to take any further action.

I want to know particularly whether his services have been satisfactory; if he has been a good agent and if his continuance in the service based on his record is desirable.

GUTENBERG BIBLE INVOLVED IN PLEA

Former Vollbehr Employe Says Commission Is Due Him for Services.

U. S. OWNS COLLECTION

A suit involving the famous Gutenberg Bible was filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by Otto M. Stanfield, of New York City, who asks that the court issue an injunction preventing Otto H. F. Vollbehr, of Berlin, from turning it over to the Library of Congress.

The Bible, part of the valuable Vollbehr collection of fifteenth century books, was recently sold to the library for $1,500,000 under a special appropriation of the last Congress.

Mr. Vollbehr is stopping at the Hay-Adams House, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, while he completes the transfer of the books to the library.

Mr. Stanfield says that he was employed by Mr. Vollbehr to negotiate the sale of the books, for which services he was to receive 5 per cent commission on the collection and per cent on the Bible. The total collection comprising more than 3,000 items.

He says that it was through his endeavors that the Seventy-first Congress was influenced to buy the collection. Mr. Vollbehr, he charges, has refused to pay him his due commission.

Through Attorneys Cooke and Beneman the petition to the court seeks to restrain Mr. Vollbehr from leaving the country until final adjudication on the case is made. Mr. Stanfield also asks that the court temporarily restrain the collector and any of his agents from receiving any money from the Government on the sale of the books.

GOV. ALBERT C. RITCHIE.

The Maryland Democratic convention yesterday nominated Albert C. Ritchie for a fourth term as governor, and adopted a platform containing an antiprohibition plank.

Gov. Ritchie's official record is not only unique so far as Maryland is concerned, but it is among the most notable in the annals of the States. Maryland has been progressive, prosperous and happy under his administrations. He has modernized all the functions of the State government, developed an admirable road system, cooperated with statesmanlike vision in Federal enterprises affecting Maryland, and instilled into the official personnel a courteous and energetic spirit of public service.

Maryland's chief executive long ago attracted national attention by his vigorous championship of the rights of the States and his protests against Federal encroachment on the one hand and the willing abandonment of State rights on the other. His position is so fundamentally sound that it can not be assailed by frontal attack; but he has not been content to act on the defensive. He has taken the affirmative with such cogency and persistence that he stands in the first rank of Jeffersonians. Naturally his availability for the Presidency has been emphasized in Democratic national conventions.

If the Democratic party should cross the wet Rubicon by 1932, Gov. Ritchie will hold a position of advantage in the national convention of that year. Maryland has no enforcement law, and its governor, unlike some other Democrats who are regarded as suitable presidential timber, is not a recent convert to the wet cause. He opposed the eighteenth amendment when opposition was not quite as fashionable as it is today. He proposed a practical method of applying the rule of local government to the liquor problem. His attitude toward prohibition has been consistent with his advocacy of the restoration to the States of all their pristine independence and self-reliance. He could not have been charged at any time with espousing the wet cause for selfish reasons.

Several bridges must be crossed before the Democratic party reaches the wet Rubicon. The South has already hoisted the flag of revolt against a wet New Yorker, and Arkansas has proudly proposed Joe Robinson as the ideal nominee—a dry, a Southerner and a national leader. But if the party is to become wet in spite of all, is it not possible that the South would rather support a wet Southerner than a wet Northerner? Gov. Ritchie in that case may win the prize.

DEBASING THE CONSTITUTION.

Celebration of Constitution Day was once an occasion for serious reflection upon the forces that caused thirteen American States to stake their destinies on a new type of federal union. It was an occasion for renewal of patriotism, for review of the achievements of America under the master plan of government worked out by honored forefathers. Officials and jurists extolled the wisdom of the Constitution makers, and called for rededication of American citizens to its principles.

But the modern method of celebrating this momentous anniversary is to freshen up the squabbles over prohibition. Official proclamations avoided the wet and dry issue, of course, and the committee on citizenship of the American Bar Association, which sponsors the observance, tried to subordinate the prohibition question. But this ugly issue protruded wherever Constitution Day was celebrated. The document that was once almost beyond attack is now the center of one of the most acrimonious political controversies the country has ever witnessed.

In some States it was difficult to carry out a dignified observance of Constitution Day because sentiment on prohibition is running so wild. Numerous lawyers informed the committee on arrangements that they would be unable to participate, in some cases because they feared their identification with the celebration would be considered a wet gesture, and in other cases because they did not wish to support the eighteenth amendment. Sinister implications are read into addresses on the Constitution whether or not the wet and dry issue is mentioned. The wets attempt to make prohibition inimical to the Constitution as originally adopted, and the drys take refuge behind the historic document and plead for observance of the Constitution when all they mean is enforcement of the antiliquor laws.

Whatever may be the merits of either cause, this tendency to make the Constitution the football of wet and dry factions is most unfortunate. It tends to cheapen and discredit the fundamental law. The eighteenth amendment has done more to divest the Constitution of public veneration and respect than all of its other provisions combined.

SHAMROCK'S DEFEAT.

Enterprise has made a clean sweep of the defense of the America's Cup, winning four consecutive races from Shamrock, but the natural elation over an American victory is diminished by the realization that it marks the final appearance of Sir Thomas Lipton in the role of challenger for the laurels that attend international yachting supremacy. Sir Thomas is Britain's grand old man of yacht racing. Five times in the last 30 years he assumed single-handedly the burden of building and racing a boat in an attempt to regain the trophy which the schooner yacht America, in a race around the Isle of Wight in 1851, won for the United States. Before this year's races Sir Thomas let it be known that he was sailing his last Shamrock in international competition, and he sealed this decision on Wednesday, when Shamrock's main halyard parted, with the statement: "No single man in England can build a million dollar yacht alone. Hereafter it will have to be syndicate against syndicate."

What happened to Shamrock in the series of races sailed off Newport is a mystery. From the first race no one could doubt the superiority of Enterprise, but Shamrock had won victories in foreign waters before she was brought to the United States, and she bore the reputation of being an exceptionally dangerous contender. Except for the ill-fated race in which her main halyard parted, Shamrock never so much as challenged Enterprise, and even in the race that ended by the accident it appeared that the defender had the edge. It may be that the balance of Shamrock was altered to her disadvantage when she was stripped of her cabins and living gear for the races. It may be that the radical metal mast of the Enterprise gave her a weight advantage that no wooden-masted boat could overcome. The showing of Shamrock was disappointing, as much to the American people as it was to gallant Sir Thomas.

It is to be hoped that a British syndicate will be organized to make the challenge for the America's Cup. Sir Thomas desires to be relieved of the burden and responsibility of keeping alive the international cup races, but it is highly desirable that they be continued. A syndicate, with adequate financial backing, can meet the demands of international cup racing better than an individual. Sir Thomas labored under a disadvantage from the start, in that his Shamrock V was called on to race the pick of four syndicate-owned yachts, each specially designed and constructed to contend for the selection as the official defender.

FIDAC IN CONGRESS.

The Federation Interalliés des Anciens Combattants is now in its second decade, its vigor unimpaired and its field for service increased manyfold. An outgrowth of the war, dedicated to the cause of peace and conceived to permit of cooperative attack upon problems that grew out of the war, Fidac might easily have been destroyed in the bitterness and jealousies of the postwar years in Europe. At present the eleventh annual congress of Fidac is in session in Washington, with 200 representatives in attendance. These delegates speak for the host of 10,000,000 who were brothers in arms in the World War. They have come to Washington from Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Poland, Portugal, France, Great Britain, Roumania and Jugoslavia, and have met here many buddies from Canada, Australia and America.

There was a spirit born of the war that transcended materialism and nationalism without submerging patriotism, a spirit that was born in common suffering and forged on a sacrificial altar. Fidac was organized to perpetuate the ties that grew up between individuals who fought in the allied armies, and to work for peace. The early postwar years in Europe witnessed a constant procession of incidents that were calculated to destroy these ties, but Fidac weathered the storm, binding its members together for the common good. As the years pass Fidac promises to play an increasingly important part toward keeping Europe in the middle of the road that leads to peace.

Washington welcomes the representatives of Fidac. It trusts that their deliberations may have fruitful results of world-wide import.

PARADOXICAL FARM PROBLEMS.

The agricultural problem has become the great American paradox. This was quite evident when the drought inflicted hardships upon thousands of farmers and yet raised the prices of staple crops so that farmers in general may reap a profit. But the paradoxical nature of the problem has become still more apparent from the discussions at the inter-American conference on agriculture.

"The existing economic instability and disorganization in extensive rural sections of our country," says Dr. L. C. Gray, economist of the Department of Agriculture, "are essentially the outgrowth of a land policy which threw enormous areas into private ownership far beyond the needs of the population for agricultural land." The distribution of free land was, in its day, an important contribution to the prosperity of the country. Any American citizen could make a good living off the extensive acres offered him by the Government. But now that agriculture has become intensified and the farmer produces for an industrial population as well as for himself, the abundance of land under cultivation has brought the rural population to grief.

Dr. Gray suggests that the equilibrium might be reestablished if the Government reacquired surplus land. Presumably such purchases would be confined to land of doubtful or indeterminate agricultural value, which represents about one-third of the entire area. The Government has given this land away. Whence would it secure funds to repurchase it and withhold it from production? What would happen to the families on unproductive farms put out of use by the Government? Some land can no doubt be acquired and advantageously devoted to timber production, but any suggestion that funds be drawn from the Treasury to buy up marginal farms is too fantastical for consideration.

H. H. Bennett, of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, brought to the attention of the conference a factor that may curtail overproduction at great ultimate loss to the farmer and the Nation. Enough land to support a nation, he said, has been made useless for food production by erosion. A minimum estimate places the number of acres destroyed in this manner at 17,500,000. Plant food washed out of the soil is 21 times as great as that absorbed in the production of all crops, and it can never be restored.

Nature is providing its own remedy for overproduction, but it will not become effective until irreparable damage has been done, and then only at a tremendous cost. Not the least among the paradoxical situations confronting agriculture is how to halt this gigantic waste of soil and to preserve it for future use without stimulating the production of greater surpluses. If conditions continue as they are at present much of the surplus agricultural land will be ruined by the time it is needed, and if it is reclaimed now it will sink the farmer further into the slough of depressed prices. Even if the Farm Board succeeds in regulating current production, there are enough of these more momentous perplexities to keep the agriculturists busy for many years.

MACHINERY AND WORKERS

By FRANKLYN HOBBS,
In the American Bankers Association Journal.

In factories each year has witnessed the invention or development of new labor-saving devices which have made it possible for one man to do the tasks formerly assigned to two, or sometimes five. This application of mechanical power, and of machine tools, has been going forward at a rapid pace for at least two generations.

The findings of the various manufacturing censuses provide the base information for a study from which reliable figures may be developed. As such a census has been taken biennially since 1919, such figures for the later years provide material for a very accurate check of the trend in the substitution of mechanical aid for the manual labor of the artisan.

The year 1919, following the close of the World War, developed a tremendous factory output, with a total value exceeding $62,000,000,000. The factories employed 8,998,000 workers and had a total pay roll for the year of $10,460,000,000. The value added by manufacture was nearly $25,000,000,000, and each worker's labor product was valued at $2,757, for which he received a wage of $1,162.

The reaction from the 1921 slump brought factory production to a total of $60,530,000,000 in 1923. The number of factory workers employed jumped back to 8,777,000, only about 200,000 below the high record of employment in 1919, and fully 1,750,000 above the employment figures for 1921. Again in 1923 earnings for workers stepped up, reaching an average for the year of $1,254, this being the first time that the average wage of factory workers ever exceeded $4 per day, the average having been only $1.37 per day in 1899. During 1923, the workers received 43 per cent of the gross value of their labor product and 18 per cent of the total value of all factory production.

The census of 1925, and that of 1927, developed no new angles to the situation.

It is evident that, through the use of more efficient methods and the application of mechanical power and automatic equipment, the factory worker has, in this period of 28 years, steadily raised his own wage from $426 per year to $1,299 per year. He has increased his own income by 200 per cent, while raising the value of his labor product to his employer by 220 per cent. He is still receiving for his labor about 40 per cent of its gross value to his employer; and his remuneration represents 17 per cent of the total value of all manufacturing production, just as it did for the 20-year period 1899 to 1919, inclusive.

It requires no statistician to deduce from the figures provided by the Bureau of the Census that the manufacturing labor formerly performed by three workers is now performed by one worker, with mechanical aid. This one worker, who is now aided by machinery, doing the work formerly done by three, is also receiving the wage formerly received by the three. The machines have displaced two men out of three in 28 years' time but the remaining third man is taking down every pay day the entire wage which he and two coworkers formerly received.

It is certain that new kinds of employment have been developed so fast through our rapidly increasing demands for comforts and luxuries that it requires as large a percentage of the total population to supply our wants as it ever did. While it is true that hours are shorter, and vacations more frequent, it is also true that, where it required only 38 per cent of our total population to supply the goods and the services demanded by the whole population a generation or two ago, it now requires fully 39 per cent of the population to supply the needs of the country and the export demands.

As I stated in an article in the August Journal the introduction of labor-saving machinery has never "displaced workers as rapidly as new inventions and new demands have created new jobs for them. Our people have been at work for 150 years raising and improving their standards of living, and I see no reason to fear that they will not continue along the same lines. The future of the American working man is brighter than it ever was before, as is the future of the country itself."

NAMES OF BIRDS.

For uniformity of appeal and utterance, says the Minneapolis Tribune, the crow's name leads all the rest in birdland. His "caw" is as elemental and far-carrying as the cry of the jay, and it has been woven more uniformly into human speech. With the Dutch, the Crow is kraai; with the German it is krahe, in the Anglo-Saxon it was crawe. In Sweden it is kraka, and even in far-away India it is kakka. The peewee named himself by his call, and bob white wrote his name into his greeting. By his call, the cuckoo has made himself an international character, while the chickadee has individualized himself in his utterance. When asked what's in a name, the birds might reply: "We have put most of ourselves into them, and they have been most excellent advertising."

THINKING OF THE SPRATTS.

The case of Jack and Mrs. Spratt
Oft cited here has been,
Since one liked lean and one liked fat
They licked the platter clean.
But still I wonder, dinner done,
Did all their tastes as smoothly run?

Did Mrs. Spratt walk hand in hand
With Jack life's journey through?
Could she his every habit stand
And all his people, too?
And were his cousins such that she
Was glad to ask them in for tea?

I know at meal times they agreed
When down alone they sat,
But was Jack always glad to feed
The friends of Mrs. Spratt?
And could he always keep his grin
When folks who riled him happened in?

The Spratts a roast of beef could share
And lick the platter clean,
But married life has more to bear
Than choice of fat and lean.
I often wish they'd thought to write
Just what would cause the Spratts to fight.

What Do You Think of the Whites Who Sold Guns to Savage Indians?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE time is coming when every citizen of the United States must choose between loyalty to his country and support of its enemies.

His country is at war. Like the wars of other ages, it is a conflict waged by relatively small groups whose business is combat; but it is actual warfare, made terrible and degrading by ambush and slaughter and vicious propaganda and conflicting claims of righteousness, and no citizen can forever remain neutral.

There was a time when the wisest and most patriotic of citizens might have wondered on which side his duty lay. Principles and ideals were so confused—right and wrong were so entangled—the cause of righteousness was so encumbered with evil alliances and good was attempted in such an evil way that a citizen who meant well could not determine which side promised the greater injury to his country.

But now the conflict emerges from the fog of conflicting claims and confusing issues and is revealed at last as a struggle between the forces of government and the forces of armed outlawry.

It is no longer debatable. The patriot has no choice. His citizenship, his honor and his sense of decency demand that he oppose and help to suppress the bandits, racketeers, bribe givers and bribe takers, blackmailers, extortionists and hireling assassins who are now in armed and contemptuous rebellion against the Government.

Whether the citizen is "wet" or "dry" does not matter. The prohibition question is one for honest citizens to settle among themselves by constitutional means.

The vital question at issue is whether the forces of Government or the forces of outlawry shall dominate our civilization.

You can't dodge the issue. He who is not with the Government is against it.

In Canada some weeks ago two bandits were on their way to the penitentiary 21 hours after they robbed a bank. London police preserve order and make arrests without firearms. Denmark has fewer major crimes than a single American city of a million population.

Why? Why are these other lands so free of crime? Because their citizens are partisans of the government and enemies of crime.

America can not suppress crime until decent citizens scorn and abominate criminals.

When every honest and patriotic citizen, regardless of his political views, is man enough to stand with his country's servants and demand the immediate and merciless destruction of civilization's enemies then crime will be suppressed—and not until then.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

IMA DODO ON THE YACHT RACES.

Dear Editor: Well, I have been following the international yacht races, and you will have to pardon my yawning. The whole idea is lost on me, anyhow, and I think it would be just as much in keeping with the times to stage a race between a couple of surface cars, tallyhos or high-wheeled bicycles.

* * * *

It was a big mistake to throw out those other boats, the Weetamoe, Yankee and Whatziss, and limiting it to a two-boat contest, especially when you consider that it would take at least a dozen boats to make it even fairly exciting. They should have pooled all the boats, including the Shamrock, and then chosen sides. This is the only way Sir Thomas Lipton could get a break, as it has been proven many times that he can't accomplish anything with one vessel.

* * * *

If the committee had let Lipton have the Shamrock, the Yankee and the Whirlwind and let America be represented by the Enterprise and the Weetamoe it would have been a better spectacle, although it now looks as if awarding the Shamrock to Lipton's side would have been a dirty trick. If we were as sporty as we claim to be we would let Lipton have the Shamrock one day and we would take it the next. The only point is that once we had taken it off his hands, Sir Thomas might be too foxy to let us give it back to him again.

* * * *

I saw the first two races myself, and if you have insomnia they are the thing for you. If you can stay awake during an international yacht race you are beyond cure. I can't tell you what a big disappointment the first race was to me. What got me was the complete lack of hurry on anybody's part. It was the only race I ever saw in which no haste was shown. The two boats drifted up to the mark so slowly that at first I thought they were trying to get out of the engagement altogether.

* * * *

The skipper of each ship appeared to be giving a lesson in dignity and poise, and it looked to me as if they were bored with the business before the race had been on fifteen minutes. They didn't even exchange hard looks. If the ships had ever been close enough I am sure one of the skippers would have invited the other over to lunch and a game of pinochle.

* * * *

Well, things went on that way for five or six hours, with no change in the position of the boats, and when it was all over it was a great relief to everybody. A lot of spectators couldn't make out whether it was a yacht race or a Senate filibuster.

* * * *

I am off international yacht racing and am going to fill the aching void in my life with chess lessons and turtle derbies.

Yours truly,
IMA DODO.

History and Hairpins.

Journal of Commerce: There were hairpins 3,000 years ago. Queen Shubad of Ur wore 'em. A contemporary suggests that Lilith used them to fascinate Adam along with Eve, the queen of Sheba, by whom Solomon had a child, and many other ancients. But bobbed hair is putting the hairpin out of business. Birmingham, England, manufactured 4,700,000 pounds of them in the year before the World War began. In 1928 its product was less than a million pounds.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Enterprise" a Lucky Name, as Proved by Capt. Sterret's Victory in 1801.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During some historical research work this week in the Library of Congress—newspaper section—I came across this most interesting and inspiring news item of 129 years ago, linked with a name most popular and justly prized. The article is printed in the Tennessee Gazette, Nashville, November 2, 1801. It appeared four months after the event it describes.

WASHINGTON TOPHAM.

Victory of the Enterprise.

"On the 11th of August, 1801, the schooner Enterprise, commanded by Capt. Sterret and carrying 12 6-pounders and 90 men, bound to Malta for a supply of water, fell in with a Tripolitan cruiser of 14 6-pounders and 80 men.

"At this time the Enterprise bore British colors. Capt. Sterret interrogated the commander of the Tripolitan on the object of his cruise. He replied that he came out to cruise after the Americans, and that he lamented he had not come alongside of some of them.

"Capt. Sterret on this reply hoisted American in place of British colors and discharged a volley of musquetry, which the Tripolitan returned by a partial broadside. This was the commencement of a hard-fought action, which began at 9 a. m. and continued for three hours.

"Three times during the action the Tripolitan attempted to board the Enterprise and was as often repulsed with great slaughter, which was greatly increased by the effective aid afforded by the Marines. Three times also the Tripolitan struck her colors treacherously. When for the third time this treacherous attack was made, Capt. Sterret gave orders to sink the Tripolitan, on which a scene of furious combat ensued, until the enemy cried for mercy.

"Capt. Sterret listened to the voice of humanity, even after such perfidious conduct, and ordered the captain either to come himself or to send some of his officers on board the Enterprise. He was informed that the boat was so shattered as to be unfit for use. He asked what security there was that if he should send the men in his own boat they would not be murdered? After numerous supplications and protestations, the boat was sent.

"The crew of the Tripolitan was discovered to be in the most deplorable state. Out of 80 men, 20 were killed and 30 wounded. Among the killed were the second lieutenant and surgeon, and among the wounded were the captain and the first lieutenant.

"So decisive was the fire of the Enterprise that the Tripolitan was found to be in a most perilous condition, having received eighteen shots between wind and water.

"When we compare this great victory with the fact that not a single individual of the crew of the Enterprise was in the least degree injured, we are lost in surprise at the uncommon good fortune which accompanied our seamen and the supreme management of Capt. Sterret."

Jacksonian Democrat Objects to Wet Attempt to "Bootleg the Donkey."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So far as extreme drys and extreme wets are concerned, I say, "A plague on both your houses." But I have been more or less of a Jacksonian all my life, and what specially stirs my wrath is the attempt of the wets to bootleg the Democratic donkey.

A full column of your popular paper would not be enough space in which to express my feelings. But perhaps I may be permitted to make reference to the recent astonishing misuse of our time-honored doctrine of States' rights by wet demagogues.

These most narrow-minded of Constitution tinkers would make the country safe for temperance, so they assure us, by letting each State suit itself in the matter of the manufacture, sale and consumption of liquid intoxicants, while the Federal Government would stand by to prevent illicit shipment of booze across State lines.

This is an alluring scheme to set before the voters, but how about its practical application? In the seemingly simple task of stopping the flow of liquor across our national borders the United States has thus far failed.

Imagine it, then, under the crude constitutional arrangement proposed by these thirsty patriots trying to stem the ebb and flow of booze between 48 States!

At one time I may have been hard-boiled, but if any unholy political combination like that here indicated is formed, it will go far toward making me ashamed of Democracy and sorry that I was ever a wet.

HICKORY.

Roof or Awning Should Be Placed Over Street Car Platforms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Tuesday afternoon I was waiting for a Potomac Park car on the platform at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue when the sudden hard shower came up. I was soaking wet in a few minutes. I could not seek shelter because my car was supposed to be due.

The car platforms are erected for the protection of people from traffic while waiting for the cars. In view of the fact that so many people, men, women and children are often drenched while wafting for cars, I think the car company should put a roof over the platforms and thus protect the patrons against rain, snow and sleet. If a roof were put over the platforms it would aid in preserving the health of car riders, as many persons contract bad colds from being caught in the rain in this manner.

Most of the showers come up between four and four-thirty in the afternoon, just when many of the Government employes are leaving work. It would not put the car company to much trouble to place a roof or awning over each of the downtown platforms.

Fidac Envoys Are Feted at White House

President and First Lady Greet Guests in Garden.

WAR veterans of ten nations were honored yesterday at the garden party given by the President and Mrs. Hoover in honor of the delegates to Fidac and Fidac Auxiliary, now meeting in Washington. With many high ranking officers of the American Army and Navy among the guests, uniforms were much in evidence, and many not in uniform wore decorations, the orders of every country which fought with the allies in the World War being represented.

The guests had all assembled in the White House garden when the President and Mrs. Hoover made their entrance, a highly effective entrance as not only the White House aids, but all the officers present stood at salute as the strains of "Hail to the Chief" announced the coming of the commander in chief.

Greetings were first extended to the groups of foreign delegates, and, after all the company had been formally welcomed, the President and Mrs. Hoover made the round of the several delegations, pausing to exchange a friendly word or two with many of the foreign dignitaries. For a long time the President stood in animated conversation with Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, who commanded the British in the Dardanelles campaign, and later Lady Spencer-Churchill, honorary president of Fidac Auxiliary, had long conversations with President and Mrs. Hoover, whom, perhaps, she had met in England.

Two distinguished warriors met in Gen. Hamilton and Gen. John J. Pershing, who seemed to find much to talk about. Gen. Pershing was in uniform and Gen. Hamilton was literally bowed by the weight of the decorations on his breast. Prominent in the group of foreign guests were Lieut. Col. Fred W. Abbot, president of Fidac, with Mrs. Abbot, Princess Alexandereine Cantacuzene, president of Fidac Auxiliary, and Mme. Jean Goy, secretary general of the auxiliary.

President Hoover wore the informal dress which he favors for summer time, white trousers and blue coat, and Mrs. Hoover had chosen a gown of black and white chiffon, with just a touch of blue woven into the material. It was made on close-fitting lines, with the skirt dipping gracefully, and was topped off by a big untrimmed hat of black rough straw. She carried a bag embroidered in straw braid in bright colors.

Princess Cantacuzene was gowned in black lace and wore a black hat, the broad red ribbon of one of her decorations giving a note of color to her costume. Lady Spencer-Churchill had chosen an ensemble of figured crepe in shades of brown and tan, with which she wore a small brown hat. And Mme. Goy, one of the beauties of the Fidac Auxiliary group, made a charming picture in a figured crepe gown, with bright green splashed on its black ground. Her hat was a small model in beige straw.

The widow of the war-time commander of the Roumanian army, Mme. Anestasiu contributed a colorful note to the picture by appearing in Roumanian national dress, with a lace veil bound about her brow.

The "gay-striped marquees," usually a feature of White House garden parties, were missing yesterday, but refreshments were served from many flower-laden tables set under the trees in the west side of the garden. Chairs, arranged in groups conducive to conversation were all about and tempted guests to linger. Altogether the stateliness marking a White House reception was tempered by a most gracious and charming hospitality. The red-coated Marine Band played during the fete.

Diplomatic representatives of the nations belonging to Fidac were in the company, among those glimpsed being Mr. Frederick Nano, Charge d'Affaires of Roumania; Mr. Ronald Campbell, Counselor of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, also of the British Embassy, and Maj. Georges Thenault, air attache of the French Embassy. Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart was effectively gowned in tomato red crepe, worn with a huge dark brown hat.

Arriving early were the Vice President with his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the latter looking very smart in beige lace with a large crin and lace hat and a boa martin neckpiece. Mrs. Gann was in high spirits, confessing a happy, luxurious vacation from social duties, "spent on my terrace beside a pile of books." With them among the earlier arrivals was Mrs. Walter F. Brown, wife of the Postmaster General, who was wearing gray crepe yesterday, with a black hat and fur.

The Cabinet found its representatives in Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary Mellon, the Secretary of War, Mr. Patrick J. Hurley, and Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy. With Mrs. Brown, Mrs. James J. Davis "did duty" for the Cabinet ladies, the majority of them being still out of town for the late summer holiday. Mrs. Davis was a picturesque figure in turquoise chiffon with lace and a close-fitting hat of the becoming blue shade.

Gen. Pershing received a cordial welcome from everybody and extended greetings to many of the distinguished visitors from abroad whom he has known for so many years. He chatted for some time with Mr. Allan Hoover, who seemed to be enojying himself immensely.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams came early, Mrs. Williams in a dark blue printed chiffon; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Francis H. Pope, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries and Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Himes formed an animated group. Mrs. Pope and Mrs. Fries favored chiffon while Mrs. Himes had chosen a red silk print.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Merritte W. Ireland, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. D. Connor, Col. and Mrs. A. R. Emery and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, wife of Maj. Davidson of Bolling Field, were there. Also Rear Admiral and Mrs. Spencer S. Wood and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the latter in brown and yellow printed chiffon with a hat of brown straw.

Others noted during the afternoon were Mrs. Hugh L. Cumming, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, past president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Robert S. Walbridge, vice president of Fidac Auxiliary for the United States and known all over the world as the "Salvation Lassie," for her work in the World War; Maj. and Mrs. William Wolff Smith, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edward A. Kreger, Miss Marian Darrah, Mrs. Donald Macrae, president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Adalin Macauley and Capt. and Mrs. Joel T. Boone.

Festivities began yesterday with luncheons given at the embassies and legations of the countries represented at the conference. The one exception was the French Embassy, the French delegates to Fidac having arranged a luncheon at the Carlton. There were 80 guests. Earlier the delegates had been entertained by M. Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires of France, at a cocktail party at the embassy.

Last evening the delegates to Fidac, their wives and the delegates to Fidac Auxiliary attended a brilliant dinner given at Wardman Park Hotel, with Gen. John J. Pershing as host. There were 200 guests present, among them a group of high ranking officials and diplomats from the embassies and legations of the allies.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the Vice President, will attend the luncheon to be given today by the American Legion Auxiliary in honor of the delegates to Fidac Auxiliary. This will be held at the Mayflower and at the same time the American Legion will give a men's luncheon for the Fidac delegates. In the evening both groups will be guests at a dinner at the Congressional Country Club, for which Mr. Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, is to be host.

BROTHER OF CAPONE HELD IN GANG DRIVE

Chicago Police Nab Only One of 26 "Public Enemies" Named in Warrants.

JURY TRIALS DEMANDED

Chicago, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The huntsmen pounded through the brush of Chicago's nether world today in search of "public enemies" and found their birds had flown.

But one was flushed, Matthew Capone, youngest brother of the best known quartet of Chicago gangland, who has no criminal record.

A police squad watching the Capone home for a chance to pick up "Scarface Al" or Ralph, whose names adorn the list of 26 wanted on vagrancy warrants in the latest drive to expel hoodlums from Chicago, gathered in the youngest brother as he stepped from his automobile.

Over the pleas of Mrs. Theresa Capone that Matthew was a "good boy and hasn't done any one any harm," they took him to the lockup and charged him with driving his automobile without State or city licenses. He was later released on $150 bond, which he posted himself.

Minor Offenses Heretofore.

Matthew's only offenses have been such charges as speeding, including an arrest in Philadelphia while attending Villanova College during the prison term of his brother Alphonse for carrying a revolver.

Danny Stanton, Capone follower and the only one of the 26 wanted hoodlums now in custody, asked jury trial today on the assortment of charges lodged against him. The slamming of a courtroom door was enough to flatten him on the floor instinctively, but assurances of his attorney restored his composure and he busied himself with fending off photographers while the attorney obtained continuances of the gun toting, disorderly, vagrancy and pandering charges.

The board of strategy of the anti-racket campaign determined upon unconditional surrender of the racketeers today when Judge John H. Lyle reported emissaries of some of the "public enemies" had sought to negotiate their surrender on favorable conditions.

Six Months' Term Meted.

A six months' jail term was meted out to Louis Baer, minor racketeer, under the revived vagrancy act today. Judge John Lupe sent Baer to the house of correction immediately. Baer was arrested September 10 on complaint of a beauty parlor operator that Baer had tried to force him to join an association.

The hunt for the big racketeers thus far proving futile, Sheriff John E. Traeger said he would help by extending the search to the suburbs.

Meanwhile a corps of assistant State's attorneys pored over the books and records of ten Chicago labor unions, gathered in raids yesterday in search of evidence that racketeers had gained control.

19 on Lost Vessel Sought in Pacific

Schooner's Wreckage Is Found Scattered on Sea Off Oregon Coast.

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Coast Guard craft searched the waters of the Pacific southwest of Cape Blanco, Oreg., today for survivors of the lumber schooner South Coast, believed foundered with the captain and crew of 18 men.

The South Coast left Crescent City, Calif., northbound Tuesday afternoon in a heavy fog and was not seen again. Wreckage from the vessel, an empty life boat, a floating deckhouse, and many logs were found scattered on the sea.

Capt. Stanley Sorenson, master of the vessel, was said by relatives here to have dreaded the south coast of Oregon, considered very treacherous. The crew all signed on from the San Francisco Bay region. The South Coast, one of the oldest vessels in coastwise service, was built in 1887 and remodeled recently. It carried a cargo of 100,000 feet of cedar.

MISS MYSTERIOUS - - - By LARRY LAWRENCE

CHAPTER XX.

Mike moved a little closer to Babe. She stiffened, but said nothing. He put an arm about her shoulder. She waited a second, steadying herself, getting control of her voice. Babe did not want to anger this man, yet cringed at the thought of a kiss from him. No matter what the consequences, she was determined to fight if need be. The idea of a caress from this cheap gangster was revolting.

"What's a matter, cookie?" Mike spoke first. Her frigidity was arresting.

"Why, not a thing, Mike," Babe said. "Only I think you had better drive on and finish your errand. It is getting late. You have to go to Scareye's yet tonight, you know."

"You are a crosser," Mike spat out. "You said you would be a regular pal. And then you freeze up. You think I'm a sucker?"

"Certainly not, Mike. You just misunderstood. That's all. I'm being a pal, right now. I'm riding along with you."

"Yeah. You make me take you. I'm doing you the favor."

"You are absolutely right, Mike. You are doing me a favor and I appreciate it."

"You don't show it very strong. You could be a real fellow, you know."

"Mike, get this straight. Just because I walk out on the boy friend—well, that doesn't mean anything. I am just teaching him a lesson. But I don't need you to help me. And Mike, if you are square with me, he might be grateful. Do you see what I mean? And then if you didn't happen to be square, why it's a cinch he would be plenty mad."

"What are you doing, threatening me?" Mike started to bluster, but ended meekly enough. He was yellow and Babe could tell it now. She had herself well in hand. She saw that her bluff was working. And he had given her the weapon with which to fight him. He had given it to her by the suggestion that she was the "wife" of a big shot in the world of racketeers. Now she was threatening Mike with that nonexistent big shot who would resent any unwelcome attentions shown her. Mike knew personally of two or three boys who had been taken for rides just because they had not respected women who "belonged" to big shots. He decided he had better be more careful.

"Well, Pat, you don't want to be sore just because a guy stopped a minute to let the engine cool."

"Oh, that's all right, Mike," Babe said. "I understand perfectly. When you run one of these high-powered cars at 20 miles an hour for 10 minutes, why then you have to cool it off. Sure. It's all right, only remember this, Mike! You are a nice fellow to be with, just as long as you can remember who I am."

And Mike got the point at once. After all it might add to his stature with the boys to be seen with such a beautiful girl. And he believed she would be strong enough with the main party to take care of him if he pleased her. Mike was always looking for the main chance. She might say a good word for him if it came to that. There was no doubt in his mind that she was way up in the world and had influence where it counted.

It was an easy victory for Babe and she congratulated herself. Mike drove on over the winding trail and at last came to a tiny cabin hidden in the trees. Lights shone from the windows, casting weird shadows as they flickered.

"Do you want to come in and meet the folks?" Mike asked.

"Well, if you are going to finish your business right away I might as well wait in the car."

Mike agreed and he came out in a few minutes. Turning in the small lot about the house, he headed out on the tortuous drive and back the road. Now Babe was very much on the alert again. She must keep her directions well in mind. She had a feeling for directions as carrier pigeons and mariners seem to have. Mike turned north again on the gravel road and again Babe marked the miles off in her mind. It was not far until he swung into another private roadway so obscured by trees and brush that one could easily pass it unnoticed. If the other private road was full of turns and twists, this one was even worse. And the roadbed itself was worse than the other had been. It was even narrower. Mike had not said that he was going to the log mansion of the Boss, but Babe was certain that he was now driving toward it and was quivering with excitement.

For nearly fifteen minutes they bounced and shook over the rough path and then Babe detected a faint gleam through the trees. She knew that in summer when the foliage was green and full even the brightest lights from that mansion would not penetrate.

"Now remember, you're not coming in here," Mike ordered. "You had better get in the back seat now. Get down low and stay down. There will be a man on sentry duty at the gate and he may come out and have a look at the car. For Gawd's sake don't give yourself away. He'll know me, so he won't look far. Remember now, keep down and stay down."

Mike stopped while Babe got into the back seat. She was praying silently that Mac was safe. Determination to slip into the house and find him if possible fixed itself in her mind despite Mike's warnings to stay hidden.

As Mike got closer to the narrow portal he gave a signal on his horn, three short, three long and three short blasts. Babe recognized this was the S O S of the international code and wondered if this was a pass signal. She thought it funny that he would sound that distress signal. There was no answer, she noted. He was soon at the gate and had turned the car into a circular drive. From her position almost on the floor she could not see the man who had come to meet Mike, but she could hear him talking in low tones.

Mike got out. They had a few words and Babe could tell that they moved off toward the house. She waited to give them time to have entered the doors, then she came from her hiding place. The circle was in such a position that she could not see the house, so she got out of the car and crept stealthily toward the glow that marked the huge cabin. Soon she found the road that led to the gate, but as she advanced she heard a noise as of a man walking back and forth. She decided to get back into the thickets and try to approach the house from the side. It was not far away now. There was shrubbery making a shield or heavy fence, but Babe thought she could penetrate this and creep up to a window.

As she squirmed into the shrubbery she came up sharp against a heavy wire fence. She felt for the top of it and found it was higher than her head.

"This gangster certainly means to protect himself against surprise attacks," she thought. "I can never scale this fence, so I'll have to go back to the gate and take a chance." Getting out of the heaviest shrubbery, still brittle from the winter, twigs cracked and popped until it sounded like miniature bombardment. She stood stock still to see if the noise had been heard. There was no indication that it had but as each step she took now seemed to cause more noise she was almost breathless with the effort to move cautiously.

Another step and she saw the opening that led to the front door. Shaded lights revealed the size of the rambling log house. Blinds were drawn close in most of the windows. Babe took another step cautiously forward, thinking to dash through the gateway and run up to the house. As one foot came down a branch snapped with a noise that seemed almost deafening to her excited senses. Immediately a beam of light played on the gateway. She had jumped back at the noise and this was all that kept her from being caught in that searchlight. Crouching low she waited. The beam was focused on the opening. It searched the ground, then was turned upward and directed at first one sheltering post and then the other.

For five minutes the light was held on the gateway and Babe lay, crouched down in her hiding place, afraid to move an inch for fear of detection. No one came from the house, however, and at last the light was switched off. Now she was afraid that Mike would be returning at any minute. She must get back in the car before he started toward it for fear he would be escorted by a guard with a light. Moving as quietly as possible she crawled toward the circle where the car was parked. It was slow work and ruinous for her dress, but she continued to crawl. Once in the back seat she breathed easier.

She was worried about the condition of her ensemble. The skirt was torn in several places. Her coat looked as if it had been pulled through a briar patch. Working rapidly she did what she could to clean it but she had little success. "Maybe Mike will not notice in the dark," she tried to reassure herself. "But this makes it certain that I have to drive back to Milwaukee tonight. Maybe it is just as well. I have at least found the place. And maybe Mike will have news for me when he comes out." She had faith in her ability to pump Mike.

Time began to drag. Two or three times she determined to get out of the car, make a dash for the house and try to gain a vantage point from which she might peer in. The suspense was beginning to tell on her nerves.

Maybe Forseith really was insane and had taken pleasure in torturing Mac. Maybe, even now they were torturing him. Whether or not they were, the thoughts were torturing her. Patience was not her virtue. Just as she made up her mind to try and race to the house she heard men's voices. She got down in the bottom of the car again and pulled the robe over her but strained her ears to hear what was being said.

"It's your imagination," some one said.

"No. I tell you some one was here. I heard noises. You can't fool me."

"You're jumpy, Boss." Some one spoke the words clearly.

The voices were coming nearer.

"Are you sure you didn't bring any so and so with you?" the Boss demanded. He was talking to Mike, Babe could tell. She could hear Mike's reply.

"Get the lantern," the Boss ordered. She almost shrank into a ball. If they started a search she was caught. There was a wait of a few seconds and then a ray of light brightened the darkness enough so that she could tell a powerful lantern was being held aloft.

"Turn on the beam," the Boss called in a loud tone. The beam was played on the gateway and this lighted up the circle where the car was parked.

Babe felt sure they would see the prints of her high heels, see the trail she had left in crawling through the shrubbery.

The group came through the gateway. The voices were getting louder and louder as they drew nearer.

"Look in the car," she heard the Boss order.

(Associated Press.)

Harry F. Guggenheim, United States Ambassador to Cuba, held a lengthy conference with Secretary of State Stimson yesterday, after which he told newspapermen that he expected to return to Havana during the first week in October. The ambassador declined to comment on the situation in Cuba, which recently has been reported to be unsettled.

The ambassador arrived here by plane from Roosevelt Field, New York, and was undecided as to how long he would remain in the Capital.

Behind Every Change There's a Reason

THE law of cause and effect dictates that "behind every change, there's a reason." And there's a reason behind Electrolux, the Gas Refrigerator.

More Electrolux, Gas Refrigerators, were sold in Washington during the past month of August than ever before. And more are constantly being sold. People are changing to gas refrigeration, and there's a reason for that, too.

The reason is that "Domestic refrigeration belongs to the gas industry." Simplicity of design gives Electrolux "natural advantages" which more people are realizing every day.

HERE ARE SOME OF THEM

—Electrolux is noiseless.

—Electrolux has no moving parts.

—Electrolux is cheaper to operate than any other automatic refrigerator.

—Electrolux can never wear out because a tiny gas flame and a trickle of water do all the work.

When you buy a refrigerator you should think in terms of years of satisfaction to come. When you get an Electrolux Gas Refrigerator that is just what you are buying. You will never have to pay for service because there are no moving parts to wear out and because the Washington Gas Light Company gives free service on all appliances.

Ten dollars down and the balance in 18 months will give you automatic gas refrigeration. If you are thinking of buying a refrigerator, you should see Electrolux before deciding.

Across the U.S.A. and back 7180 miles IN REVERSE!

A triumph for the* NEW "CRACK-PROOF" TEXACO

DRIVE a few yards in reverse gear. Notice how the engine races. Notice what a pull it places on your motor! Then imagine driving across the entire continent, from New York to Los Angeles and back —all the way in reverse!

That's exactly what the "back-up" boys, world's champion reverse drivers, did with a Ford at a speed of 10 to 12 miles an hour. This is equal, according to Ford authorities, to 50 to 60 miles in high gear.

Success depended upon perfect lubrication

Practically all radiator ventilation and fan cooling were eliminated by driving backward. Their engine speed, equivalent to 50 to 60 miles in high gear, was maintained for 42 consecutive days. The abnormal engine heat was intensified to almost scorching proportions on the Great Salt Lake Desert, where the thermometer registered 121° F. Anything less than perfect lubrication would have spelled disaster.

FACTS

The driver—James C. Hargis, 26, St. Louis Interior Decorator.

Car—a new Ford roadster equipped with rear headlights. The forward gears were taken out so that it was impossible to drive any way but backward.

Conditions—Drove from New York to Los Angeles and back, 7180 miles, in reverse gear.

Products used—The same new crack-proof Texaco Motor Oil and "dry" Texaco Gasoline sold in all our 48 States.

Crack-proof Texaco meets every test

After they had conducted many comparative tests they selected the new crack-proof Texaco as the one motor oil most likely to withstand the terrific heat and engine strain. And once again the new Texaco has lived up to every expectation —has proved its longer-lasting qualities that will not break down under any driving conditions.

Modern engines demand an extra margin of protection. They demand better lubrication. Car owners demand lower oil consumption, smoother, quieter engines and freedom from carbon.

The new crack-proof Texaco Motor Oil and Texaco-Ethyl, the "dry" Ethyl Gasoline, provide all these advantages. Wherever you may be, stop at the first Texaco Service Station—where you see the Texaco Red Star with the Green T.

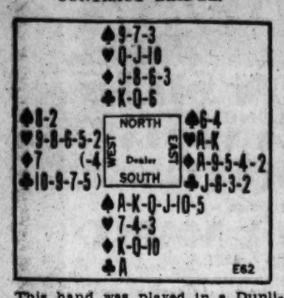
WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.



This hand was played in a Duplicate Contract Bridge match held recently in Detroit for the city championship.

South opened the bidding with three Spades, showing at least eight sure tricks at that declaration and asking partner to jump to four with one probable trick. West, holding a bust hand, of course, passed; and North, with normal support in Spades (which, however, is not a requisite for a jump of a three-bid), the King and Queen of Clubs and a possible trick in Hearts, jumped to four Spades, which ended the contracting.

The prospect of saving game and defeating the contract looked very dismal to West, who had the lead, but you never can tell what will happen in a Bridge game. The only chance West had to make a trick was to ruff a Diamond, so he led his singleton Seven. As no lower Diamond was missing, East knew that the Seven was a singleton; so he won with the Ace and returned the Deuce of Diamonds, which West trumped.

West now had to choose between the Heart and Club suits, hoping to put his partner in and get another ruff in Diamonds. A Heart lead might kill East's King of Hearts if he held it, and West could not hurt his hand by leading a Club; so he chose that suit.

Declarer won with the Ace of Clubs, led two rounds of trumps, cashed one Diamond, put dummy in with the Nine of trumps and discarded the losing Hearts on the King and Queen of Clubs and the good Diamond. In this way he made his contract and scored 120 below the line, and above the line 50 for an extra trick, 150 for five honors in one hand, and 300 for game. Had North and South been vulnerable they would have scored 500 for game.

A serious error was made by East; see the catastrophe that would have befallen the Declarer had East played correctly. After winning the first trick with the Ace of Diamonds he could have led first his Ace and then his King of Hearts to show only two cards in the suit; then a Diamond which West would have ruffed and returned a Heart, which East would have ruffed and led another Diamond for West to ruff. In that way East and West would have won six tricks and set the Declarer three tricks, 150 points—some difference.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

CLEANING RUGS AND CARPETS.

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Textile rugs and carpets when badly soiled may be placed on a table or other flat surface of convenient height and scrubbed with a heavy lather of mild soap and water, using either a brush or a sponge. As soon as a section is scrubbed clean, it should be rinsed thoroughly with water changed as often as it becomes discolored. This is a thorough method of cleaning, but may cause the rugs to shrink or change color, and therefore should be used with caution. It should not be tried for very thick-piled rugs unless one is sure the rug can be thoroughly and quickly dried; moisture left at the bottom of the pile may rot the threads. If possible, it is better to send valuable rugs to a good professional cleaner who has special apparatus for this work.

Fiber and grass rugs and mattings should be swept with a soft brush and may occasionally be wiped with a slightly damp cloth, or they may be cleaned with a vacuum machine. Water is likely to discolor floor coverings of this kind and must be used very sparingly, if at all. When taken out of doors for more thorough cleaning they should be laid flat and swept on both sides, but not beaten nor shaken. Grease and other stains may be removed in much the same way as from carpets.

Dare Interprets the Mode

New York, Sept. 18.

SAYS Monsieur Rodier, the famous French "Wizard of the Loom," "The vogue has passed for serge, for gabardine, for poplin and for velvet wool. How can they be replaced? By new threads, by crepes, by the retwisting of different materials—for example, of fine wools with large wools, of wool with natural silk, or again of wool with artificial silk."

And here, then, is what appears: granya, crepe ondaspor, buraflex, dramouslikasha, burex, tussabure, et cetera.

The designs used in the knitting of various light wools, cashmere, angora and the like become more intricate and varied. Many of these designs run diagonally to guard against the heavy effect women so dislike in materials.

Diamond shapes, squares, baguettes, circles, drop-stitch, ribbing, every imaginable trick in the knitters' art has been employed to furnish Milady Whimsical with bonbons for her aesthetic palate.

Our Fashion Note-Book for Fall.

Jackets, which are made of fabrics as well as furs, this fall, are in great favor. Some long and some short, they are worn with skirts fitting close to the hips and broadening out at the knees, by means of pleats or godets held by cleverly distributed decoupes.

* * * *

The smartest new belt is narrow, if it is leather, but wider, if it is made of one of the flat furs. Sometimes the narrow leather belt is matched with a bracelet, if it is to be worn with a sports costume. At other times the belt is matched with the buttons, particularly on coats.

* * * *

Honestly, now, did you ever really have all the hats you wanted? Or did any lovely lady, for that matter? The only thing that limits my hat repertoire, if you really want to know it, is my check-book—according to La Chic Secretaire that doesn't limit it enough.

* * * *

But now, honestly, if you were leaving Paris and going where you could not obtain Paris hats, wouldn't you put a crimp in the check-book, a sort of temporary one, anyhow? Well, that's what I thought—and besides, there was my Deah Publik to think of, now wasn't there? For I knew that Mamzelle would copy all the hats I bought, and then tell you how they were made so you could make them yourself—and that's exactly what she did. This week's illustrated leaflet tells you how to make three of the most practical ones, not to mention the loveliest, and if you sit down right this minute to write that stamped, self-addressed envolpe which you send to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet, I'll feel as though my Paris hat buying was not in vain, after all.

* * * *

The ever smart, ever popular and ever young! Yes, the black dress with its white collar and cuffs is that, and I ask any one to deny it! Look, for instance, at Phillippe et Gaston's black crepe dress, which I illustrated for you today, and tell me if anything could be a better choice for that all around, always practical dress you need not only for your fall wardrobe but for the wardrobe of the entire year. And then there was a separate cape of the same material, and the collar and cuffs were unusually interesting.

Need we remind you again that the weekly Dare fashion letter is always in the Sunday Washington Post?

Au Revoir!

What Today Means to You

"VIRGO."

IF September 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8:40 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 to 12:30 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.

Steadying influences will be in force on this date—a splendid time for study and reflection. Materialized dreams will prove that man's reach is higher than his grasp. Small business annoyances of temporary character. A visitor or letter brings good news or pleasure.

The child born on this September 19 will have an adaptable nature and will have a democratic and friendly bearing. It will be cleverly witty, warm-hearted and optimistic. It will hate to grow up or to throw off its childish enthusiasms. It will do well in the languages, and will be fond of history. It will be indifferent toward athletic sports.

You are a chronic rusher. You always seem in a hurry, as though competing with an imaginary time table. Your mind is loaded with parcels; the parcels being doubts and worries and feelings of things that ought to be done. Both your mind and body rebel with hints of fatigue. You need not to do less, but you do need more system, more thought and fewer steps. Learn to save yourself!

You are apt to be prejudiced and rigid, and your ideas are set in concrete, out of which neither man nor time can move them. You are very loathe to try anything new, and you turn your back on things which would be to your advantage. Your opinions, your beliefs and disbeliefs are obstinate affairs, and you love to argue. You will be more tolerant as a grandmother or grandfather than a mother or father—time will do that for you.

You use up your energies within a short time, and your leisure hours should be restorative as well as recreative ones—a time of energy-making rather than energy-killing. Strenuous work and strenuous play are not for one of your type. You have an extremely jealous nature, and you are often unhappy through false suspicions. You are not fickle yourself, and are exceedingly loyal. You are somewhat of a spendthrift, but are liked for your generosity.

Successful people born September 19:

1—William B. Astor—merchant and capitalist.
2—Henry Charles Lea — publisher and author.
3—Key Pittman—senator.
5—John S. Crosby — Governor of Montana.
6—Marshall P. Wilder—humorist.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

Bring Your Cyclamen to Light Now

If you have allowed your cyclamen to stand undisturbed and unwatered in a dark place, you have prepared the way for more lovely flowers this winter.

About September 1 you will find the plant ready to begin new growth. If you would like to know its further care, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a request for the leaflet on the care of cyclamen, and address

A COLDFRAME ALWAYS AN ASSET.

TODAY I want to keep a promise I have been making by correspondence to the readers of this column and tell you the advantages of a coldframe and also offer a few definite suggestions regarding the building of one of these most useful of garden assets.

There are several reasons why every garden should have a coldframe. First, you will find it useful for seedlings which have been started indoors, for carrying tender perennials through the winter and for rooting cuttings of various sorts. So much for present uses.

Next spring you can sow seeds of annuals in the frame at least three weeks in advance of the date you can sow them in the open and as a result you will advance the blooming of your garden just three weeks. Remember the time is three weeks; if you start the seeds too early the plants will be so tall, when the weather permits transplanting, that it will be hard successfully to move them.

To be a real success, a cold frame should face south and when possible should be protected by a hedge, fence or buildings from severe winds. The sun must shine on it. The remotest shade from a tree or building will mar its usefulness. It should be constructed of cypress or other wood that will withstand the elements.

The actual frame consists of a frame of boards around a prepared bed of earth with a glass sash for a covering. The frame should be 6 feet wide and long enough to hold as many sash 6 feet long and 3 feet wide as may be needed. It must be tilted slightly toward the south so the sun can shine on it. The sash are laid on the frame crosswise. The front of the frame should be 12 inches and the back 18 inches high. It hardly pays to attempt to make sash, as they can be purchased for very little.

When the frame is in use the sash must be lifted at first during the warm hours of the day and later, when the weather gets warmer, it may be left off during the entire day but must be replaced at night. The bottom of the frame should contain fairly rich and always well-drained soil. If your soil is rather light and sandy, it should be mixed with one-fourth its bulk of well-rotted compost. The surface of the soil must be from six inches to one foot from the level of the sash. Should the nights be particularly cold when you are using the frame, it is better to stretch a piece of carpet over the sash.

When seedlings begin to grow better whitewash the glass to protect them from the sun. If seeds sown in the frame are covered with a light covering of sand they will not be likely to be troubled with damping off or fungus.

How to Keep Well

EAT FOODS YOU LIKE.

IF your food appeals to you the chances that you can digest it are good. If it repulses you, the chances are that it will give you indigestion. If you continually eat foods which tempt, the impulse to good digestion will be gradually lost. If you continually eat foods which are offensive, the dislike and the tendency to indigestion grows.

If you stop eating attractive foods when they cease to attract and, after an interval, start again with them, the stimulus to digestion is as it was in the beginning. If you stop eating unattractive foods and later begin eating them again you will find that your repulsion and consequent tendency to indigestion will start up where it left off and not at the level on which it began. The tendency toward indigestion from distaste is greater than that of good digestion from appealing taste. These conclusion resulted from experiments made by Dr. Boldyreff.

He found that when food appeals to the nose, the palate and the sight, digestive juices begin to pour out and the alimentary tube to become active. Furthermore, the juices improve in quality as well as in quantity. So far, he merely followed the footsteps of Beaumont Pavlov, and other experimenters. His discovery consisted in finding that the influence of pleasant association kept up day by day tended to wear out—the appeal began finally to pall and the juices to decline in quality.

On the other hand, if offensive or irritating foods were fed daily the harmful influence seemed to increase.

A man might take quinine one day without having his digestion upset, but if he kept it up the time would come when even thinking of quinine would nauseate him. If he stopped it for a month and then resumed it, he would start with being upset and presently would vomit after every dose. On the other hand, if he ate apple pie until he lost his appetite for it, stopped for a month and then resumed eating it, he would relish it as much as he did when he began in the first place.

KEEP WATCH ON FOOD.

J. O. S. writes: I am 43 years old and about half an hour after eating I break out over the body in hives, especially on the hands and arms. My hands puff up and itch greatly, and at times I wake up with a puffed up and very itchy lip.

What can this be, and is there a cure?

REPLY.

You are eating some food to which you have been sensitized. Stick to those foods that do not harm you and receive your reward.

TREATMENT FOR ECZEMA.

F. M. E. writes: What is a good diet for eczema? I would like to know what I can and can not eat.

REPLY.

Eczema is a word that is used to designate a group of skin disease. Most of these are due to exposure of the skin to some poison. Some phase of one's work is often responsible. Some cases are due to diet. Food eczema is due to food sensitization. I can not guess what food poisons you—if any.

250 PERSONS HURT IN INDIAN OUTBREAK

400 ARE UNDER ARREST

Bombay, India, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The strongest nationalist picketing effort of recent date caused injury today to 250 persons, many of them women, beaten with police sticks before the Bombay Town Hall in which legislative elections were being held.

The women led the movement. There were 382 women arrested as contrasted with only 18 men. Tonight, after they had spent the dav as prisoners, the women were released, but the men were not.

Like Salt Raids.

Scenes reminiscent of salt raids in the early summer before the monsoon put an end to that branch of activity of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi, were enacted when the constabulary made charge after charge to clear away the obstructionists who sought to prevent voters from reaching the polling place.

Women volunteers clad in orange garb played a prominent role in the amazing events during the polling for three legislative council seats allotted to the Bombay south general constituency. From 8 o'clock this morning until 6 this evening the disorders recurred at intervals. Each time the police cleared the streets new picketers appeared. Thousands of congress sympathizers assembled, most of them wearing Gandhi caps.

Only 1,473 Vote.

The voting district has 60,000 registered voters, but today only 1,473 cast their ballots there. Originally there were four candidates, but at noon, in the interests of peace, one candidate withdrew.

The congress committee had more than 600 women on hand for duty and there were fully that many police, some of them mounted, on the scene. The women were mobilized in a rest station just around the corner from the town hall and from where they drew their reserves to fill the depleted ranks.

The reason for today's disturbances was that the congress contends that the Indian Legislatures are not real parliamentryy institutions, claiming that those elected to such bodies do not represent the people and that, therefore, the congress should boycott all legislative elections.

Acosta Released On Flying Charge

Transatlantic Aviator Is Arraigned on Warrant 2 Years Old.

Waterbury, Conn., Sept. 18 (A.P.). Bert Acosta, transatlantic flier who was arrested in Wilton last night after he had landed his plane in a meadow, was given a nolle prosse today in Common Pleas Court when arraigned on a two-year old warrant charging him with violation of the Connecticut aviation laws.

In ordering this action, Judge Beardsley took into consideration the aviation record of Acosta, who flew across the Atlantic in 1927 as Admiral Richard E. Byrd's chief pilot.

The flier promised the court that he would avoid in the future acts in the air similar to that which caused the suspension of his license in this State in 1928, when he attempted to fly under the bridge in the center of Naugatuck, his home town. The following year Acosta was fined $500 and was suspended for low flying and stunting over Long Island fields.

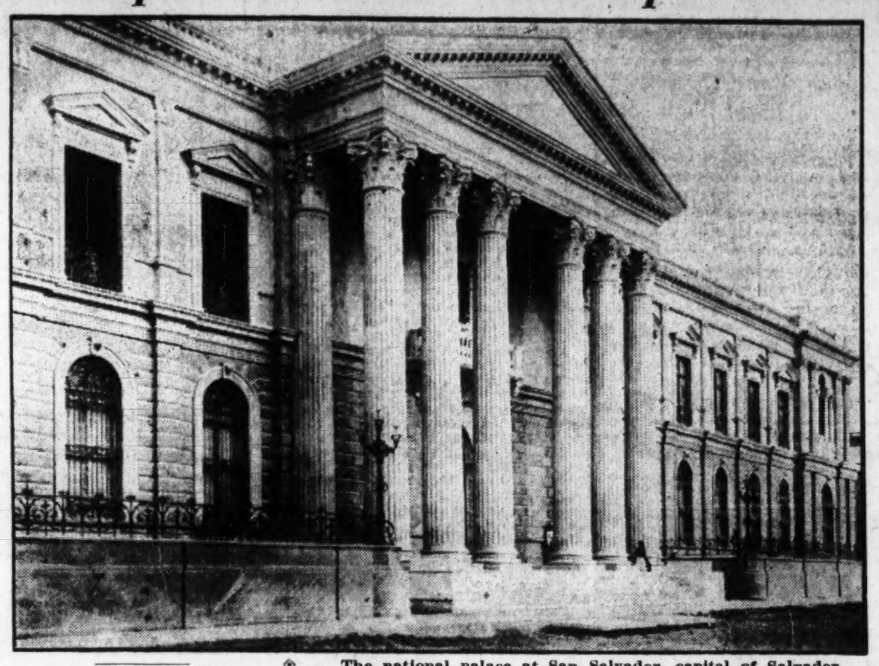
Salvador Bearing Coffee Crisis Well; Bosque's Able Rule Has Helped Nation



The national palace at San Salvador, capital of Salvador.

Six Seek Presidency in Country's First Honest Election.

By EVELYN TRENT.

Smallest, proudest, most densely populated and intensively cultivated of the five Central American republics is El Salvador, which lies squeezed between two of the largest and most undeveloped of her sister nations, Guatemala and Honduras, with stormy Nicaragua just across the Gulf of Fonseca. The only one of the five to have no outlet on the Atlantic seaboard, Salvador has always looked westward to the Pacific, where she possesses three fairly good ports, two of which are connected by rail with the capital at San Salvador.

Only this year, with the completion of the new link in the Pan-American railway system from Guatemala to Salvador, has the latter been given direct connection with the Atlantic Ocean through the Guatemalan terminal at Puerto Barrios. The overland trip from Guatemala City to San Salvador by the new railway line is one of spectacular beauty, unrivaled on this continent for the rugged grandeur of its scenery.

He travels through the chain of the Cordillera de les Andes over a line that curves up and down by easy graduations, through tunnels, over bridges and across the face of mountains, passing volcanic peaks and inland lakes as well as a hundred forgotten communities established under Spanish rule, until one reaches San Salvador, 3,000 feet lower than Guatemala City but still 2,000 feet above sea level.

The new railway link has opened up thousands of square miles of virgin territory and provided direct and easy communication between both countries, whose people have heretofore remained almost strangers to one another.

Country Has First Honest Election.

The small republic is in the throes of a presidential campaign, with six candidates in the running for successor to President Don Pio Romero Bosque, whose term expires in March, 1931, elections to be held in January. For the first time in the history of the republic Salvador is to have a free and fair election, according to the announcement of its chief executive, who has rigorously abstained from exercising any influence upon the popular choice.

With a small, powerful and wealthy ruling caste of Salvadorean families who have hitherto controlled such elections, and who have managed to retain the choice of president within their group, this in itself is an innovation unprecedented and unique.

The present administration has been characterized as one of transition from bad to good, from extravagance to economy and from political roguery to honor and enlightenment. Unification and an increase in the number of schools, a reduction by regular payments on the large national debt, regular payment of government employes together with the promotion of public works, such as completion of the new street paving and sewerage system of the capital by an American concern and the promotion of highway construction, are among the constructive accomplishments of the Romero Bosque regime. The present president will go down to history as the first to quit office, leaving the choice of his successor entirely in the hands of the electorate.

My visit to San Salvador coincided with the celebration of a national fiesta that closed all government offices and gave the entire capital over to its celebration. The president himself was in mourning for the death of a relative, and was inaccessible to the public during this interval. But I was fortunate in meting one of the grand old men of the republic, Don Francisco Martinez Suarez, foreign minister in the present cabinet, whose long experience in public life and uprightness of character have made him generally beloved.

Aristocrats Now Faced With Ruin.

He received me in the stately national palace, one of the largest and most imposing in Latin America, which houses the national legislature and ministries of government. I was ushered into a room of generous dimensions lined with portraits of great statesmen and legislators of the republic and was greeted by the venerable foreign minister, whose bearing is distinguished by the utmost composure and kindness.

The two paramount questions in Salvador today are, of course, the coffee situation and the coming presidential elections, and my first questions were naturally directed toward these. Salvador, like Guetemala, is essentially a coffee country, producing some 90,000,000 pounds a year of superlative quality, 75 per cent of which is grown on properties largely owned by the Salvadoreans themselves. From 70 to 80 per cent of the country's total exports consist of coffee.

Thus the fall in the world market price of this commodity has hit the entire population, particularly the smaller growers. The more prosperous coffee planters of Salvador, consisting of indigenous stock that traces its lineage back in almost unbroken lines to the blood of the Spanish conquistadores, form the powerful ruling class of the country that is said to make and unmake governments at their will.

These finqueros, who were wont to spend six months of the year on their plantations and the other six months in Europe, will have to remain at home for a year or so to recuperate from the acute financial depression that has seized the country in its grip, and even now they would be faced with ruin were the banks to foreclose the mortgages held on many of the large estates.

"Salvador is not in such a bad state, all things considered, as some of the other coffee-producing countries," said Don Francisco in response to a query as to the general economic situation.

"As Salvadorean coffee is of excellent quality and the crop is good, there is always sufficient demand in the world market, but the price, of course, will be lower and the profits less. Lack of sufficient rains, however, may affect the next year's crop unfavorably.

Schools Set Up Even in Army.

"As for the coming elections, there are so far six candidates for the presidency of the republic, and possibly there will be more before the campaign is over, as there are still four and a half months to run. For the first time in the history of Salvador we hope to conduct a perfectly free election, in accordance with the president's proclamation. Heretofore outgoing presidents have always had their own candidate for office, who was almost automatically elected. It is a new thing for the country to have the candidates selected freely by the people themselves."

"Do you think that the people are sufficiently educated to elect their own candidate without undue pressure from the wealthier classes?" I asked, recalling conversations held with various people, who stressed the general illiteracy of the population and the ease with which they could be herded to the polls on election day to vote according to the instructions of their landlords.

"Education is making great strides throughout the republic, thanks to the progress made in various departments of the government, including the ministry of education and of public health, where money is being spent to educate the children in orphan asylums and public hospitals," he replied. "Even in the army our soldiers' barracks have been turned into schools, where the soldiers are taught to read and write. The municipalities too are spending part of their revenue on public instruction. Thanks to all this we hope eventually to abolish illiteracy in the country."

Asked what attitude the government of Salvador took toward increasing amounts of foreign capital, particularly of American capital that are being invested in the country, Dr. Martinez Suarez replied:

"Much capital is being invested here from abroad, and the government likes to see foreign enterprise coming into the country, as we have little capital of our own available for such purposes. We particularly welcome investments of American capital in El Salvador, because it helps to improve the already good relations that exist between the two countries."

In view of the fact that American investments in Salvador have increased from about $3,000,000 in 1913 to something over $54,000,000 in 1930, largely in the form of railways, banks, mining and electric light and power, I inquired what attitude the Salvadorean people took toward the United States as a whole.

Aviation Making Rapid Strides.

"The attitude toward the United States differs among different elements of the population, but in several it may be said that we have always been good friends with the American people, as shown by the fact that we were on their side and sympathized with their cause during the World War," he replied.

"A former American Minister to Salvador once told me that friendship between our two nations had always been strong and effective because Salvador has always been sincere and frank in her dealings with the United States as with every other people. I believe that these good relations will improve even more in the future on account of the increasing communications between the two countries."

Asked what is being done to open up El Salvador to modern progress, the foreign minister replied:

"Aviation is making rapid strides in the country, and the ministry of aviation has organized a school of aeronautics. The American company that has opened mail and passenger service between the Central American republics has also helped to increase our communications with the outside. The new railway link with Guatemala has also helped to stimulate our overland communications, drawing us closer to Guatemala and connecting us with the Atlantic seaboard.

"It is now but six hours by air between San Salvador and San Jose de Costa Rica, and scarcely an hour by air betwen Guatemala City and our capital. In addition, excellent highways now connect the capitals of Honduras and Guatemala with our own. Good communications always improve the relations between countries, and we are on the most friendly footing with our neighbors."

In parting, I asked the elder statesman of Salvador to give me a message for the American people.

"I have always especially admired the founder of the United States and also the sustainer of the liberties of the American people," he said. "George Washington and Abraham Lincoln offered two great examples to all humanity, and I can only express the hope that the President of the United States and the people of that great country will aspire to attain those heights in order that they may merit the affection and confidence of all nations."

Among the presidential aspirants of El Salvador most frequently spoken of in political circles are Dr. Alberta Gomez Zarate, former minister of war in this cabinet; Dr. Enrique Cordoba, a lawyer and also former war minister under the previous administration; Senor don Arturo Araujo, an engineer of note and popular among the masses, together with two military candidates, Gens. Antonio Claramont and Maximiliano Martinez.

Dr. J. Gustavo Guerrero, now president of the council of the League of Nations and one of Salvador's leading statesmen, diplomats and internationalists, is also mentioned as a "candidato de conciliacion," a compromise candidate upon whom all parties may unite. The names of Dr. Carlos Leiva, Minister of Salvador to the United States, and of Dr. Antonio Villanova K. are also spoken of as presidential possibilities.

PERU TO TRY LEGUIA, ILL IN JAIL, AT ONCE

IS NOT TO LEAVE CELL

Lima, Peru, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Augusto B. Leguia, who lost the presidency of Peru last month through a revolt headed by Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro, will go on trial Saturday charged with peculation.

At the same time the sanctions court, newly formed under the provisional military government, announced proceedings against Benjamin Huaman De Los Heros, former premier, and it is understood that actions will be opened against eighteen other former officials who are now refugees in foreign embassies and legations.

The former premier is himself a refugee, and will be summoned to trial by posted notices. If he does not surrender he will be sentenced by default.

Former President Leguia now lies ill in Lima Penitentiary, to which he was transferred this week from the political prison on San Lorenzo Isle. To open the case his deposition will be taken in the penitentiary, where he will be given legal counsel by the government in case he does not make his own arrangements.

Justice Manuel Felipe Umeres will take the deposition Saturday and it is understood that all matters connected with the Leguia trial will be handled with the former president still inside the penitentiary. The government wishes to avoid taking him into court, it is understood, to prevent a possible demonstration against the one-time executive.

East Falls Church Pair Hurt in Car Collision

Bernard Marsten, of East Falls Church, Va., was severely injured, and Miss Marie Tribble, of the same town, was badly shaken up last night when Marsten's car struck another on the Conduit road near Glen Echo. Marsten was treated at Georgetown Hospital for lecerations, contusions and a possible fracture of the skull. Miss Tribble sustained several cuts on her right arm.

The other machine, driven by an unidentified Negro, did not stop after the accident, which was investigated by Policeman K. H. Davis, of the Seventh Precinct.

PRESIDENT'S SCHOOL STARTS NEW TERM

NEW ROAD IS PLANNED

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Sept. 18.—The President's mountain school on the Rapidan, conceived by the Chief Executive last year when the unschooled mountain lad, Ray Burracher, called on him at the Rapidan lodge to pay his respects and present an opossum, reopened this week with 23 pupils, the same ones who entered last spring.

The teacher, Miss Christine Vest, herself a mountain girl, but a college student withal, returned from Kentucky two weeks ago and has spent most of her time since making ready to resume classes for the children, many of whom had never been inside a school until the President and Mrs. Hoover built one for them. Mrs. Hoover has been with Herbert Hoover, jr., at the fishing camp, a mile away, most of the week, but has not visited the school this term.

Classes opened early in the spring with 23 pupils and, although attendance dropped to about fifteen by closing time, Miss Vest enlarged the scope of her work to include a Sunday school and the teaching of some adults so that the first term was quite successful.

During the vacation period, United States engineers have surveyed a new road from the camp to the school and it is reported that construction will start on it soon.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

The Hero Lies.

DEAR MISS McDONALD: Please try to give me sound advice on the problem I am sending you. I am going to follow your advice and do whatever you tell me to.

I am 18, rather good-looking and I go with a young fellow 22 years old. Now my problem is just this: I don't know what is the matter with me sometimes I hate him and sometimes like him very much.

He lies to me terribly. He never asks me to go with him regularly but when I go out with someone else he gets terribly mad. He only comes down when he feels like it and he doesn't take me any place very often.

When I ask him to go any place he says, "I'm too tired," or, "I worked hard today." He says that he doesn't care if I go out with some nice fellow but he hates to see me run around with the kind I always pick. Miss McDonald, do you think he cares for me although he never told me that he loved me?

Do you think that I should stop going with him? Please answer as soon as possible for I am waiting for your advice. MARVINA.

So, he lied terribly. Well that does not sound one bit promising, for the man who lies when he has no earthly reason for lying will certainly develop rare talent when the demands of married life begin to really tax his ingenuity. You sometimes like him and sometimes hate him. Naturally. It would be hard to feel enthusiasm for a man who was, at the moment, engaged in telling you a lie.

Why not follow his generous suggestion and go out with other men? By the way, if he ever loves you, he will not be so generous in that respect. But it is fortunate that he does not love you, and that you do not love him. You are 18 and should be finding out a little about various characteristics of many men—not just the shortcomings of one.

Start now to see less of him and more of others, and by-the-way, is there any ground for his remark concerning the type of men you go with? Remember, it is better a thousand times to sit at home with the cat than to go about with inferior men. Nothing hurts a girl so definitely. Nothing marks her so fatally in the eyes of better-grade men. Be particular. It pays. And take no man seriously for at least three years.

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help those who read this page. Express views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

right to challenge the Athletics in the world series now just around the corner.

In the closing contest, the home team outhit the visitors, eight to five, but the safeties of the invaders were a bit more substantial than those of the home guard. St. Louis won the game with three hits, converting two triples, a home run and a base on balls into the four runs needed to sweep the board.

Grimes Proves Tight In Pinches.

Burleigh Grimes, who spent nine years pitching for Brooklyn, but since 1926 has been touring the National League, was tight in the pinches, while St. Louis was able to reach the delivery of Raymond (Babe) Phelps, Brooklyn youngster when hits were vital.

Grimes stilled Brooklyn bats when activity would have meant at least a temporary red flag turned against his team's mad dash, which has given it 24 victories in the last 28 games.

Hollis Thurston, a veteran, rushed to the rescue of Phelps and stopped the Cards in their tracks, but then it was a lost cause. Grimes received sensational support, especially from young Charley Gelbert, the shortstop, who was all over the premises scooping up ground balls, sometimes with one hand, and throwing runners out. Douthit helped with a startling catch, and Grimes, too, made an extraordinary fielding play on his own account.

Phelps Retires Nine Straight.

Phelps, who is called "Babe" because he is big and "Chatterbox" because he has little to say, retired the first nine Cardinals in succession, a sensational one-hand catch by Ike Boone, robbing Douthit of an extra-base hit at the very start.

But again a base on balls rose to plague the ambitious Robins. Douthit walked to start the fourth. Wright took Adams' roller and forced Douthit at second, and then Frisch, who had not made a hit in the series, tripled to left, scoring Adams. Bottomley kept the ball rolling with a home-run drive over the right field wall and three runs were in on two hits.

Another run came in the sixth when Douthit tripled to start it. Adams walked and Phelps retired in favor of Thurston. Frisch forced Adams as Douthit scored. The Cardinals later garnered a pair of insignificant singles from Thurston, but they were harmless.

Gilbert's Triple Results in Run.

The Robins, too, made three hits in the first five innings, but they were allotted one to an inning and figured in nothing but the averages. Gilbert tripled with one out in the sixth and

Cubs Get 6 Hits Off Fitzsimmons, Giants Win, 6-2

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Behind the six-hit pitching of Fred Fitzsimmons, the Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs today, 6 to 2, to rob the Chicagoans of a chance to take second place in the standing. The Giants won the series, two games to one, and finished ahead for the season, twelve to ten.

George Kelly's home run with Gabby Hartnett on base in the fourth saved the Cubs from a shutout and gave them the lead for the only time during the game. The Cubs made three of their six hits in that inning.

Mel Ott started the Giants off ahead by connecting with Guy Bush's delivery for a homer in the second. After losing the lead New York regained it in the fourth by bunching five more hits off Bush for four runs. Singles by Ott and Hogan and a walk to Jackson filled the bases. A double play retired two men with no score, but Fitzsimmons singled to bring in the two men that remained on base and Hughey Critz hit a homer to complete the rally. The final Giant run came in the seventh on a triple by Leach and Lindstrom's single. Lynn Nelson, who replaced Bush in the seventh, gave this tally.

Through this defeat the Cubs dropped 2½ games behind the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, with only

American Boat Gains Big Lead Early in Fourth Race.

Enterprise's elapsed time surpassed by 3 minutes 5 seconds the former cup record of 3:13:18, set over a triangular course by the American sloop, Columbia, in winning the second race of the 1901 series from Shamrock II off Sandy Hook.

It was short, however, of the world's record, for racing under similar conditions, set by the erstwhile cup candidate Yankee at 2 hours 48 minutes and 35 seconds in a 25-knot breeze during the trials this August off Newport. On that day, Enterprise did better than 3 hours for the 30-mile course.

The winner's margin today of 9 minutes on the first leg, beat to windward, in which she left Shamrock a mile and a half astern, clinched the race and was more than sufficient to offset the substantial gains of the challenger in the two subsequent legs.

The big green sloop, finishing with her best exhibition, closed more than a half-mile of the gap in the reach to the 20-mile mark. She footed along beautifully and continued to gain on the run home, but she did not have a chance to overhaul her distant rival. Shamrock's elapsed time was 3:15:30.

Sails Majestically Across Line.

Enterprise swept majestically across the finishing mark, her sails full-bellied and her craw alertly at their posts, in a characteristic display of efficiency, regardless of the siren blasts of victorious acclamation in their ears and the knowledge that the cup was clinched.

Shamrock, trailing by nearly a full mile, plunged gamely toward the finish. She had put on a fine comeback, after a disastrous getaway, but it amounted to nothing more than a gallant gesture.

As a matter of fact, Shamrock V never had much of a chance from the start to finish of one of the most one-sided unexciting yachting contests ever waged with the historic "old mug" at stake. The 31-year-old quest of the gallant old Irish Baronet Sir Thomas Lipton, ended where it began —with American seamanship and boat-designing skill superior in every vital particular.

Hopes of British Again Crushed.

Not only was the sweeping triumph of enterprise a final blow to the hopes of Lipton, a keen disappointment to the thousands who had for sentiment's sake hoped he would at last come through to win, but it was a climax to the smashing series of setbacks administered to British challengers by American yachtsmen.

It used to be that "Britannia ruled the waves," but since 1871, fourteen successive challenges by Scotch, Canadian, English and Irish sailormen have been turned back with little or no glory to the losers, all seeking the queer-looking, vase-like silver "mug" that the schooner America brought back to the United States in 1851.

Out of 38 races that have been sailed, British challengers have been victorious only three times. On two of these occasions, in 1871 and again in 1920, American defenders were disabled. Only one race was won by a challenger on its merits and that was scored by Shamrock IV over Resolute with Charles Francis Adams at the wheel, in 1920.

British Sportsman Spends Fortune.

That accomplishment, at least, belongs to Sir Thomas Lipton, although in the five challenges he has made since 1899, his boats have captured only two out of sixteen races. All except Shamrock IV have been the victims of American sweeps and the veteran British sportsman has spent in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 on the quest in vain.

The repaired challenger was a beaten boat before she went to the starting line today. What slim chance she had of checking her losing streak was dissipated by poor handling on the first leg of the 30-mile course. She tacked off after gaining some advantage in a brief early brush, seeking the breeze that would lift her along fast enough to get to weather of Enterprise.

The maneuver was fatal. Shamrock went too far inshore, losing her wind on a long port tack, while Enterprise was still pointing high and footing faster. By the time the challenger got back on the starboard tack, she was over a mile behind and lost another half mile before turning the first mark. They were never within hailing distance after that.

16 of 18 America's Cup Races to U. S. Boats

Newport, R. I., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Enterprise today scored the sixteenth victory for the cup-defending American boats in eighteen races against the five challenging Shamrocks of Sir Thomas Lipton, the following record of their rivalry shows:

Year.	Defender.	W.	Challenger.	W.
1899	Columbia	3	Shamrock I	0
1901	Columbia	3	Shamrock II	0
1903	Reliance	3	Shamrock III	0
1920	Resolute	3	Shamrock IV	2
1930	Enterprise	4	Shamrock V	0

Note: 1930 series, best 4 out of 7; all others best 3 out of 5.

Time Is New Record; Tactics of Invader Prove Costly.

Maureen Orcutt Gains Canadian Semifinals

Montreal, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Maureen Orcutt, of New York, eliminated Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser, of Ottawa, in the quarter-final round of the Canadian women's open golf championship here today, 6 and 5.

Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, was the sole Canadian survivor of the day's play. She defeated Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., 5 and 4.

Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, N. Y., the defending champion, gained the semi-final round at the expense of Marion Bennett, of New Britain, Conn., 3 and 2.

The other semifinal berth went to Mrs. Harlan Higbie, of Detroit, who defeated Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, at the twentieth hole.

Special to The Washington Post.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 18.—Wes Ferrell, Cleveland ace, is still the pet jinx of the Washington Club. The right-hander who has not been beaten by the Nats during his two years in the American League, bested Sam Jones in a hurling duel this afternoon, 3 to 2, to turn in his twenty-fifth victory of the season.

Jones held the Tribe to two hits and struck out eight batters during the first six frames, but weakened toward the close. Jamieson's single, his steal of second, and Porter's double brought in the winning run for Cleveland in the ninth inning.

Eddie Morgan, Indian first baseman, didn't have a put-out until the ninth inning. Errors gave the Nats both their runs, while Cleveland profited to the extent of one tally on misplays.

A miscue by Montague gave the Nats an unearned run in the first inning. Myer walked, went to third on Manush's single and scored when Montague fumbled Jamieson's return throw.

Jones Starts Game In Good Style.

Montague's second error gave Washington another tally in the third. Myer singled, took second when Montague muffed Rice's fly, and scored when Cronin singled to left.

The veteran Washington right-hander continued his sensational work in the third, adding Sprinz and Ferrell to his strike-out list. After Myer robbed Jamieson of a single in the fourth, Porter doubled for Cleveland's first hit, but Jones breezed Averill and Morgan to bring his strike-out total to eight.

Two errors by Treadway gave Cleveland a run in the sixth without the aid of a hit. The rookie third baseman fumbled Ferrall's grounder and Jamieson strolled. Treadway then fumbled Porter's sacrifice, filling the bases. Ferrell scored on Averill's sacrifice fly to Manush. Morgan walked, again loading the sacks, but Hubbard pounded into a twin killing.

Ferrell Drives in Tying Run.

The Tribe tied the score in the seventh. Goldman walked and went to third when Falk, batting for Sprinz, singled. Ferrell also singled to score Goldman.

A perfect thrown by Dave Harris prevented the Tribe from scoring in the eighth. Morgan singled with one out, and went to third on Hodapp's double. Sewell batted for Montague and was purposely passed, filling the bases. Fonseca, batting for Goldman, filed to Harris, whose accurate thrown doubled Morgan at the plate.

The winning run was scored in the ninth after the first two Cleveland batters had been retired. Jamieson singled, stole second and scored on Porter's double to left.

RED SOX AT FOXALL.

The Foxall A. C. Nine, of the Capital City League, will be host to the crack Washington Red Sox Sunday on the Foxall field on Conduit road. The game is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock. Mattare will do the pitching for the home club.

Tomorrow the Red Sox will travel to Fredericksburg, Va., for a game.

ST. JOSEPH'S TO TRAVEL.

Grove Called in to Save Weird Game Deciding Race.

68-Year-Old Leader Again Places Club in World Series.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Connie Mack led his Philadelphia Athletics to the threshold of world series gold and glory for the second consecutive season today, as they scored a 14-to-10 victory over the White Sox, while Washington was losing to Cleveland, to clinch the American League title.

The 68-year-old leader—born Cornelius McGillicuddy—saw his team move into the championship port today for the eighth time since he took charge of the club. His first triumph was in 1902. He waited until 1910 before his team again was able to conquer, but it won again in 1911. The years 1913 and 1914 also were his, but he wrecked his great club at the end of the latter season and carried on for 15 years before he fashioned the club that won the title last year and followed up with a world series victory over the Cubs.

On October 1 the kindly strategian will send his team in quest of a fifth world baseball title. In 1910 and last year the Athletics defeated the Cubs in the world series play, winning four games to one on each occasion. John McGraw's New York Giants defeated Clan Mack in 1905, but in 1911 and 1913 the Giants were Mack's victims, Philadelphia winning four games and losing two in 1911, and taking four out of six two seasons later. Boston, under the late George Stallings, won four straight from the American League title holders in 1914, causing Mack to wreck his club and assume a fifteen-year task of rebuilding.

Athletics Stagger To Victory.

The Athletics did not blaze impressively to victory today. Rather, they stagger in. George Earnshaw, one of Mack's right-handed aces, was extremely wild and was removed in the third after being caught for five runs. Philadelphia tied it up in the third with a five-run assault of its own, but the Sox kept going and by the end of the sixth they were leading by 10 to 9. The Athletics arose in their might in the seventh and banged in five more runs to win the ball game and the pennant.

It was necessary to call in Bob Grove, the fireball southpaw, to quell the Sox. Grove went to work after Earnshaw, Le Roy Mehaffey and George Walberg had failed, and smothered all further attempts to delay the title clinching.

By AL MUNRO ELIAS (Famous Statistician).

THE consistently brilliant Al Simmons will give the Athletics an edge in left field over any of the four possible National League entries in the coming series. A tremendous hitter and a fast, dependable fielder, Simmons has been an invaluable factor in helping the Mackmen keep their nose in front of Washington all season.

In spite of the fact that the critics predicted a short major league life for him when he broke in about five years ago, because he hits with his left foot in the water bucket, Simmons has developed with rapid strides, until today he is one of the most dangerous batsmen in either league.

Each year finds Simmons among the leading hitters of the junior circuit, and 1930 has been no exception. He is hitting at the terrific clip of .381 and, what is more important on his value to his team, is his runs driven in total 148. He ranks second only to Lou Gehrig in this respect. His 191 hits include 35 doubles, 13 triples and 34 home runs, and he has crossed the plate 137 times.

Riggs Stephenson is the closest approach to Simmons the National League can offer. In the matter of averages, the Cub left fielder is only 6 points behind. However "Ole Hoss" has played in but 103 games and in many of these he has appeared only as a pinch hitter, against 126 for Simmons. Stevie is a hard and timely

JONES SHOOTS POOR 78 IN U. S. AMATEUR PRACTICE

Police Check Champion's Gallery

Mackenzie and Voigt Turn in Scores of 75 at Merion.

Jimmy Johnston Has Card of 71 in First Practice.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Another large gallery, kept in check by policemen and ropes, followed Bobby Jones today in his second practice round over the Merion Cricket Club's championship course, where next week the world's premier linksman will attempt to capture his fourth major title of the year, the national amateur.

Jones teamed up in a foursome with T. A. Bourn, youthful "native" champion of England, and lost by a margin of 2 up to Roland Mackenzie, brilliant young Washington golfer, and George V. Rotan, veteran Texan. The incomparable Atlantan was not yet attuned to competitive pitch, for his demeanor reflected disappointment as many of his shots went astray. He took 40—38—78, six strokes over par. Mackenzie played the best golf of the quartet, turning in a card of 38—39—75.

Johnson Scores 71 In First Practice.

Harrison R. "Jimmy" Johnston, of St. Paul, United States amateur champion, arrived today and took his first practice late in the afternoon. Playing in a foursome with Richard A. Jones, of New York, as his partner, against Max R. Marston, former amateur king, and Gene Homans, Johnston scored a 71 to make the match end all even.

Scores ran lower than any previous day of the practice. Walter S. Brown, Californian and Hawaii champion, and George Von Elm were tied with Johnston for the low scoring honors. Others who turned in low scores included J. Wood Platt, 72; Arthur Sweet, 73; Johnny Lehman, 74; Don Carrick, 74; Chick Evans, 75, and George Voigt, 75.

Players Guests of Penn A. C.

Prior to going to the links today nearly all of the prominent players were guests at a luncheon in the Penn Athletic Club, at which Jones was made an honorary life member of the club, an honor bestowed on only four other persons, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Clarence Chamberlain, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Lieut. Frank Schoble, a young Philadelphian who lost his eyesight in the World War.

Bobby Jones today emphatically denied reports that he had recently suffered an attack of appendicitis.

"No, there's nothing to it. I just had a stomach ache," said Jones.

—Lincoln Fields Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

UNDER ideal weather conditions and the track in perfect condition at Lincoln Fields, seven well-balanced races have brought out the best 3-year-olds in training at the Midwest track. The Riverdale, an allowance affair for 3-year-olds and up, has attracted eight smart colts and fillies and will hold the feature spot on the program.

Mrs. E. Denemark's smart gelding, CHEERS, a recent winner at this track, has been training briskly and should account for the major share of the purse. SUPREME SWEET, the R. W. Selden colorbearer, will furnish the opposition. PRINCETON has shown speed in his recent starts and may upset the calculations.

FIRST RACE—As usual the opening dash has attracted the limit of eighteen 3-year-olds and up to contest the $1,200 purse over the six-furlong distance. A steady performer, SHIFT has been selected to lead this field to the judges' stand. The Roberts racer is partial to this track and with good racing luck should win. FAVORITE II has turned in some brilliant trials recently and will battle it out with the Roberts colt. ROODLES is rounding into form again and may save the minor award.

SECOND RACE—Another limit field will face the starter here when 18 maiden fillies, 2-year-olds, sprint over the six-furlong strip. REGAL LADY, a clever filly from the H. P. Headley barn, should graduate against this field. ONE ALONE displayed speed in her recent start and may gain the place. CHERRY MAY is selected for show.

THIRD RACE—ROYAL MANAGER came from far back in his recent start to annex the purse and should duplicate his previous effort in this class. PERFECT ALIBI, highly regarded last time out, will furnish the opposition and should take the place. BLACK FLYER has turned in some good races but would appreciate a longer distance than the 6 furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—MAIDEN'S TRYST, although beaten in her last start, will improve over that effort and should outfoot this field. GAMBOL, from the Rancocas Stable, turned in a clever performance recently to finish second, and may surprise with a victory. MISS ROSEDALE, a consistent mare despite her nine years of campaigning, may falter at the mile distance.

SIXTH RACE—This test has brought together eighteen older horses to contest the purse over the mile and a sixteenth route. DEMON is selected on his recent race and may account for the winner's share. SAMBO BROWN has been close up in most of his starts and should finish second. BONAIRE, well fancied last out, should hold the others safe.

SEVENTH RACE—FAIR ARGUMENT, Mrs. R. Pollard's colorbearer, appears ready to take down a purse and will appreciate the mile and a sixteenth distance. TRUE BOY has been raced into condition and figures to take the place. MARY DALE has been selected to take down the minor prize.

NIFTY took a good lead at once and raced in her best form, lengthened her advantage after entering the stretch and won easily. ESTIN ran slow to get going but made up much ground. WATER LAD finished fast to catch SILVER CORD in the last stride. SILVER CORD showed early speed, but was tiring at the finish. PARAGRAPH was in close quarters in the stretch. JUDGE HAY made up some ground. SENORA showed early speed. JUDGE ARGO acted badly at the barrier, broke slow and was never in contention. NICHELSON was badly outrun.

BETTY BARRETT improved her position in the last quarter, but did not threaten the leaders. BURNT BROWN tired badly in the last quarter. KATY M'COOK stopped after setting the pace early. MILLS DEVELOPING NEW BACKFIELD FOR HILLTOP

Scalzi, Bozek Eclipsed by Rivals

Danieu, Alenty, Gillis and Maczees Groomed as Regulars.

Bordeau, Leary Also Overshadowed by New Material.

By JACK ESPEY
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

POINT LOOKOUT, Md., Sept. 18.—Georgetown's 1930 back field, if observation of the various combinations being used here now counts for anything, will not present a single one of the ball-toters who last year carried the burden behind the line for the Blue and Gray.

A likely looking quartet now drilling usually as a unit presents Russell Danieu, quarter back; Bill Maczees and Joe Alenty, half backs, and Mancell Gillis, full back.

Those names are not exactly unfamiliar to followers of Georgetown football teams, but still they arouse surprise in connection with naming a first-string back field, for where, it might be asked, are Buddy Bordeau, Johnny Bozek, Ed Leary and Johnny Scalzi, who were so-called regulars last year?

The last-named four are still in the fold and battling like mad to regain their positions, but in spite of all their spirited effort the other quartet appears to have the first string selection coming their way.

Mills Silent on Line-Up.

As for a definite selection, Head Coach Tommy Mills is as silent as a mummy. The season is too early yet, he says, to name a first team. He isn't satisfied, furthermore, with any four ball-carriers, and when he occasionally shifts them about, inserting Bordeau for Gillis, Scalzi for Danieu and Leary and Bozek for Maczees and Alenty, his statement is affirmed.

Nevertheless the Danieu-Maczees-Alent-Gillis combination, day by day, receives assignments of longer duration than its rival. This was the quartet that started in yesterday's scrimmage, also, incidentally, the one that performed more smoothly.

Danieu is a junior and for the first time is winning recognition for his heady selection of plays, clever running of the ball in the open field, and excellent passing. He weighs about 145 pounds and has a fancy way of stepping that reminds you of a scared rabbit. Danieu changes his direction as fast as could be desired and keeps his feet remarkably well. A tackler must close his arms on this boy before he goes down.

Gillis Best Blocker On Squad.

Maczees, Alent and Gillis are also of the clever-running type. All are hard men to nail once they get past the line of scrimmage. In addition, these three are exceptionally effective as blockers and can be depended on to get their opponents out of the way of the man lugging the ball.

Gillis probably is the best blocker in the squad. In this art he outdoes Bordeau, whose 180 pounds, if used properly, would create all kinds of havoc in clearing the way for the runner. But Bordeau has not yet learned to do this consistently well. He is prone to leave his feet before he should, thereby missing his target altogether and proving of no value on the play.

Bordeau, however, is going to make it a real battle for the full-back berth, inasmuch as no other candidate packs the drive in his charges through the line as this New York woodchopper. Bordeau's legs are virtual pistons that propel him forward with great power. At times last year Bordeau showed Washington fans some of the best line plunging seen in the Capital in years.

Alenty Outstanding With Freshmen.

Alenty is a sophomore. He was the outstanding back of the 1929 freshmen eleven and bids fair to go a long ways toward stardom in varsity ranks.

Maczees last year was an in-and-outer. He flashed brilliant football occasionally, but then again lacked effectiveness. He was never able to meet requirements on defense.

The Hilltoppers today started on a new program of practice, undergoing only one session of work instead of two. They went out in the afternoon for a three-hour drill on passing, line fundamentals and tackling.

Joe Bandzul, center aspirant; George McCafferty, who is trying for an end position, and "Mush" Dubofsky, 200-pound guard who hopes to fill one of the jobs left vacant by Jim Mooney and Paul Liston, are unable to do any work at all on account of injuries. By the beginning of next week, when the training scene moves to the Hilltop in the Capital, these three should be ready to reenter the grind.

Navy Coaches Seeking Ends in Scrimmages

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 18.—Another lively scrimmage was the menu for Naval Academy gridders today. The first team is far from selected yet as far as the line is concerned, and aside from Johnny Byng, regular flank of last season, eighteen other candidates for end are puzzling the coaches as to which is the best. Today Smith, heretofore apparently obscure, showed up well.

The plebes again were used to give the varsity opposition and the crack plebe combination has the ability to make the regulars hustle. Cooler weather was welcomed.

District Golfers Play Today in Baltimore

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 18.—Glenn Spencer, new State open golf champion, will be host tomorrow to members of the Maryland State Golf Association in the third of a series of handicap tournaments, and he has the Maryland Country Club course in good condition for the event. More than 100 players are expected to compete.

The three Washington members of the State association—Columbia Country Club, Congressional Country Club and Indian Spring Golf Club—are expected to be represented by almost a score of golfers.

There will be prizes in the usual three classes, and the State handicaps will apply in all matches.

Contestants may make up their own foursomes and start any time they desire, but no tournament players will be allowed to tee off after 4 o'clock daylight savings time.

Mrs. Haynes, Mrs. Colladay Play Congressional Final

Golf Rivals Advance by Easy Victories; Stevinson Leaves for Amateur; Columbia Women Play Monday.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE final round in the women's club championship of the Congressional Country Club will be played this morning between Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes and Mrs. S. F. Colladay. Ever since this event was inaugurated at Congressional, in 1926, Mrs. Haynes has been the consecutive winner each year, and in that year, as well as in 1929, she has been opposed by Mrs. Colladay.

In addition to this the two players have been almost successively opposed to each other in other club championships. In 1925, in the Columbia Club women's championship, Mrs. Colladay won from Mrs. Haynes, but in 1926 and 1929 Mrs. Haynes defeated Mrs. Colladay for the Columbia title.

No other two women golfers have been such consistnt opponents over a series of years; but if Mrs. Haynes wins today at Congressional, it will be her fifth consecutive victory. Mrs. Colladay, in addition to being runner-up twice at the Congressional Club, has been the runner-up at Columbia for every year since 1926.

Finalists Score Easy Victories.

Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. Colladay reached the final round yesterday by comparatively easy victories over their opponents, the former defeating Miss Virginia Williams, 5 and 4, and Mrs. Colladay winning from Mrs. H. A. Knox, 4 and 3. The matches in the various flights resulted as follows:

First flight—First round, Mrs. J. M. Haynes defeated Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, 6 and 4; Miss Virginia Williams defeated Mrs. Herbert Moffitt, 5 and 4; Mrs. S. F. Colladay defeated Mrs. M. E. Miller, 6 and 5; Mrs. H. A. Knox defeated Miss Evelyn Murphy, 3 and 2.

Semifinal round—Mrs. Haynes defeated Miss Williams, 5 and 4; Mrs. Colladay defeated Mrs. Knox, 4 and 3.

Second flight—Mrs. round, Mrs. Henry J. Richardson defeated Mrs. R. C. Jones, 3 and 2; Mrs. C. B. Murphy defeated Mrs. W. R. Bush, 3 and 2; Mrs. J. B. Baylis defeated bye; Mrs. Frank Yates defeated Mrs. G. Awalt, 2 and 1.

Semifinal round—Mrs. Richardson defeated Mrs. Murphy, 5 and 3; Mrs. Baylis defeated Mrs. Yates, 1 up.

Third fiidht—First round, Mrs. Huston Harper defeated Mrs. E. J. Harding, 3 and 1; Mrs. John Cole defeated bye; Miss J. Harvey defeated bye; Mrs. W. W. MacNeill defeated bye.

Semifinal round—Mrs. Harper defeated Mrs. Cole, 3 and 2; Miss Harvey defeated Mrs. MacNeill, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, president of the Women's District of Columbia Association, announced last night that the competition for the trophy donated by Mrs. William S. Corby, former president of the association, would be staged on the course of the Columbia Country Club next Monday morning. The program as at present arranged calls for the starting of all prayers with handicaps from 10 to 18 between 9 and 10 o'clock, a. m., with the low handicap contestants starting at 10 o'clock. The trophy will be won by the player having the low net score for eighteen holes, but prizes will also be offered for the second and third low net and for low gross. Every woman golfer in the District is eligible for this competition.

Miller B. Stevinson, of the Columbia Club, who for two years held the title of District amateur champion, left yesterday for Merion, near Philadelphia, where he has been given an opportunity to compete as a substitute in the national amateur championship which begins next Monday.

Next Sunday the Woodmont Club will stage the semifinal and final rounds in the annual club handicap championship, while at the Manor, Indian Spring and Argyle Clubs there will be the first round of match play in the club championships. At the Argyle Club all contestants in the third sixteen will start at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning, followed by the fourth sixteen at 8:50. The second sixteen will start at noon and the first sixteen at 1 o'clock.

The Telephone Society of Washington tees off in its annual tournament tomorrow at Sherwood Forest with the John C. Koons Handicap Trophy going to the winner.

Prizes will also be awarded the players in each group with the lowest net score. A brass putter, emblematic of the world's worst golfer, will be presented to the player turning in the highest gross score.

The committee in charge of the tournament and the dinner in the evening has been chosen from employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac, American T. & T. and the Western Electric Co.

Field of 250 Awaits $10,000 St. Louis Open

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Two hundred and fifty amateurs and professionals, including almost all golf stars in the country, were ready tonight for the opening tomorrow of the $10,000 St. Louis open golf tournament at Sunset Hill Country Club. It will end Sunday.

So large is the field that some of the players will have to start around at 7:25 o'clock tomorrow morning, while others will not get going until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Horton Smith, slim Missouri youth, rules as the favorite, but will have a lot of competition from Walter Hagen, Leo Diegel, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Al Espinosa and a host of others. Bobby Jones is one of the few stars not here for the tournament. Chic Evans, Chicago, has withdrawn.

Advance estimates of the low score needed to qualify for the final 36 holes of play and to win the first prize have changed considerably due to recent rains slowing up the course. It is expected 150 will enable a player to go all the way through, while a 72-hole score of around 278, ten under par, is considered likely to win.

Diegel(Agua Caliente, Mexico, professional and former United States pfofessional champion, turned in a 67 in a practice round today. He went out in 32, two under par, and came back in 35, three under par.

Berg Outpoints Glick Before 15,000 Crowd

New York, Sept. 18 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The biggest crowd that ever jammed its way into the Queensboro Stadium here tonight saw Jackie (Kid) Berg, of England, do all the fighting and take all the low blows in his ten-round battle with Joe Glick, of Brooklyn, to win the decision, when 15,000 persons paid $24,500 for the privilege of cheering themselves hoarse.

Berg weighed 137 pounds for tonight's encounter and Glick scaled 139.

Right from the start it developed into a mauling brawl, with the little Englishman landing the fairer blows and forcing the action. In nearly every round Glick shot blows way below the belt and he was repeatedly warned by the referee. If the punches hurt Berg, he gave no sign, for he made no complaint and slowed up not a whit in his forward rush and his barrage of blows. From Berg's standpoint, it was a slashing battle and an exciting one.

SILVER SPRING WINS.

Silver Spring's pin tippiers outrolled the Dixie Pig maplers last night on the former's drives in one of the initial contests of the Suburban League of Maryland and Virginia. Billheimer, of the winners, with a 380 set which included a 46 game, walked off with individual honors.

SEABROOK POSTPONES.

Because of a misunderstanding the Seabrook A. C. will be unable to play the Bowie A. C. Sunday. Instead, the Seabrookmen find themselves lined up against George Harrison's Virginia White Sox.

Seabrook's other plans call for a game with Langley September 28 and the second of a three-game series against Bowie on October 5.

SEIDEL FOOTFAULTS.

Bill Seidel has improved rapidly of late, but must learn to cure himself of footfaulting if he is to do well in the larger tournaments.

W. Virginia-Duquesne In Grid Opener Tonight

Special to The Washington Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 18.—While mystery shrouds the starting line-ups, last preparations were made by the West Virginia University gridders here tonight for the opening game of the season with Duquesne University at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Pa., tomorrow evening. The Mountaineers and the Dukes will get set for the kickoff at 7:45 p. m., Eastern standard time.

It apepared this evening, however, that the Dukes will present a wall of veterans, while the Mountaineers will rely chiefly on more or less untried materia. On the basis of squad statistics and regardless of the combinations that Coach Elmer Layden, of Duquesne, and Ira Rodgers, of West Virginia, select, the Mountaineers will outweigh the Dukes on the line, but will have a lighter backfield.

Strickler Gains Decision In Cumberland Match

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 18.—Billy Strickler, Washington's rugged welterweight, defeated Socko Trenamen, of Hagerstown, Md., a light-heavy, in an eight-round sugfest here tonight. Strickler, although outweighed by 22 pounds carried the battle to his hefty opponent at all times.

Local fans were highly pleased at the way the two battled, and plans will be made to effect a return match within the next couple of weeks.

Loughran and Walker In Philly Bout Oct. 1

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Tommy Loughran, former world's light-heavyweight champion, and Mickey Walker, holder of the middleweight title, were matched today for a ten-round bout at the Phillies' Baseball Park on the night of October 1, opening day of the world series here.

Loughran defended his 175-pound crown against Walker at the Chicago Stadium last year and won a ten-round decision. Loughran has been inactive since his defeat by Ernie Schaff, of Boston, here last year.

Lynchburg High Plays Newport News Nov. 25

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 18. — Difficulties arising over the schedules between Lynchburg and Newport News High School Football Elevens have been ironed out, and the two teams are to meet here November 25. Similar difficulty is being experienced with Norfolk, and the local eleven has held open November 1 for that team. The trouble grew out of games being arranged by Norfolk and Newport News prior to assignments of dates by the State Athletic and Literary League, which is managed by University of Virginia.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS PLAYS.

The Columbia Heights Nine will travel to Alexandria Sunday to meet the St. Mary's Celtics in the second game of a double-header. The Celtics will meet the Skinker Eagles in the first game, starting at 1 o'clock.

Anacostia, Takoma Nines Seek 2d Series Victories

Capital City Contests at Silver Spring and Byrd Stadium.

THE Capital City Baseball League's "world series" will be continued Sunday with two more clashes between the four section winners for the unlimited championship of the circuit. The Dixie Pigs, Prince Georges County champions, will meet the Anacostia Eagles, District section champions, on the Byrd Stadium diamond at the University of Maryland at 3 o'clock.

The Takoma Tigers, champions of Montgomery County, will tackle the Bauserman Motor Co. tossers, champions of the Virginia section, on the Silver Spring Field at 2:30 o'clock.

Last Sunday the Eagles defeated Bauserman's, 3-2, and the Tigers jolted the Dixie Pigs, 7-3. As the series is being played on the "double-knockout system," which means two defeats eliminate a team, the Bausermans and Dixie Pigs will be entering Sunday's clashes with their backs to the wall.

The Dixie Pigs were considered by many sandlot fans to be the outstanding club in the four-cornered race for the title. They fought a brilliant uphill battle to nose out Mount Rainier for the Prince Georges County pennant. Despite their loss to the Takoma Tigers last Sunday, the Pigs are still counted strongly in the running.

Manager Waldrop expects to start Babe Clapper against the Eagles Sunday. Clapper showed well in a relief role last week. Blackie Adair will be held in reserve. It is not known whether the Eagles will use Al Brown or Jimmy Goodwyn. The latter won last Sunday's game, and it is likely that the Anacostia management will string along with him on the hill.

EDDIE DOVE,
star infielder of the Dixie Pigs, whose batting and fielding was a prominent factor in the winning of the Prince Georges County championship

Dick Hughes, who staged a comeback last Sunday in turning back the Dixie Pigs, will probably get the assignment for the Takoma Tigers against Bausermans. Hughes, when right, is one of the hardest sandlot pitchers hereabouts to beat. If Hughes falters, the Tigers will have Ray Davidson ready to throw into the breach.

Memorial Gets Share Of Campolo's Purse If He Beats Sharkey

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 17 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Victorio Campolo announced here today that in the event of victory against Jack Sharkey on September 25 at the Yankee Stadium, he would donate a share of his purse to the Navy and Marine Memorial Fund, which is erecting a $500,000 monument to heroes of the World War in Washington. The fund is to receive profits of the gate on the night of September 25, and Campolo thinks it only fitting that it also accept a portion of his purse.

Since his arrival in this country a year and a half ago, Campolo has sought little in the way of financial gain. He has accepted only those bouts which would aid him in his climb to the top rung of the heavyweight division. A victory over Sharkey will mean more to him than all the ring's fortunes.

Campolo's departure from Argentina in quest of the world heavyweight title was something of a patriotic act. Following his defeat of Roberto Roberti his countrymen begged him to inaugurate a campaign with its object the heavyweight title. His meeting with Sharkey will decide definitely whether he is to reach his goal.

CARDS NEARER FLAG BY BEATING ROBINS

Herman's home run over the right field wall, his first hit of the series, added a run in the eighth. Brooklyn launched a late rally in the ninth, but it fell a run short. Hendrick singled with one out and Boone slashed a vicious single to right, sending Gink to third. There was wild excitement in the "bull pen" of the Cards as pitchers peeled off bright red windbreakers and furiously began to throw warm-up balls. Grimes, however, was undisturbed. He mopped his brow, took another chew of slippery elm, an aid to his famous "spitter" and prepared to pitch to Lopez.

Sensational Pick-up
By Gelbert.

Warner was sent to first to run for Boone. Lopez hit to deep short and Gelbert made a sparkling pick-up and toss to second, forcing Warner. Finn took the place of Lopez at first and Flowers batted for Thurston. Flowers lifted a puny fly in front of the plate for which Mancuso had to run only a few feet. As the ball struck the catcher's glove, Grimes was kneeling in front of him with outstretched hands, prepared to catch the ball if it popped out.

The position of the Cardinals is now regarded by baseball men as well night impregnable, for the men who make the game their business look at the losing column for their "dope" and this shows that the Robins and the Cubs have each lost three more games than St. Louis.

St. Louis has nine games left to play. The Cubs eight and the Robins seven. The Cardinals now move over to Philadelphia for five games, with a double-header scheduled for Saturday. Sunday gives them an off day, the series being resumed next week.

Red Sox Win Despite Koenig's Good Pitching

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 18 (A. P.).—Koenig, veteran shortstop, went into the Detroit-Boston game today as a relief pitcher. The Red Sox won by 4 to 3, but through no fault of Koenig. He held them scoreless during the last two innings, allowing but one hit.

Koenig, who was acquired from the New York Yankees on a trade this season, has been having eye trouble and today wore glasses in the game. He showed a good slow ball, curve and some fast ones.

The Red Sox made three of their runs on a fluke homer by Scarritt off Bridges' delivery in the second inning. The ball struck Doljack's shin as he was trying for a shoestring catch and bounded to the right-field pavilion, with Oliver and Heving on base.

batter, nevertheless, and in a short series he may outshine even the brilliant Simmons.

Chick Hafey, of the Cardinals would be the second best bet the National League could have playing left field. The Red Bird is batting .354 and has batted 93 runs home, besides scoring 95 others. Except in home runs, Hafey's long-range clouting is almost on a par with Simmons'. Chick has surpassed the Mackman's 35 doubles by 1 and has hit 11 triples against 13 for Simmons. However, Al's 34 home runs represent 10 more than the Card star could manufacture.

Fred Leach has done a fine job of guarding left for the Giants, but the tremendous hitting of Simmons, Stephenson, Manush and Hafey makes Leach's .320 batting average seem paltry. Fred is a dependable hitter and a fine fielder, and will afford the Giants ample protection in left if a McGraw spurt should beat the field to the wire.

Don Taylor, of the Cubs, is a player who will be remembered for the capable job of substituting he did for Stephenson, right when the Cub chances seemed at their lowest ebb. His most notable feat was a steal of home in the ninth inning of a crucial Giant game. However, with Stephenson returned to form, it is improbable that Taylor will see much action in the series, save as a pinch hitter.

The only one of the possible series left fielders who is not hitting 300 is Rube Bressler, of the Robins, and this dependable veteran has managed to punch the horsehide at a .299 clip. However, an injury has put him out of action for the rest of the season, and his substitute, Hendrick, has been batting only .244.

Ruffing Hits 2 Homers As Yanks Win in 10th

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees won their last game of the season with the Browns today by a 7 to 6 count in ten innings, giving them 16 triumphs in the season's 22 games.

Four home runs two by Charley Ruffing, Yankee starting pitcher, featured the slugging match. Combs hit another for New York and Schulte one for the Browns. Ruffing fared better at bat than on the mound. He gave way to Herb Pennock after seven innings when his second homer had given the Yanks a 6-5 lead. Pennock allowed the Browns to tie the score in the ninth, but got credit for the victory when Lary's single in the tenth scored Cooke with the winning run. McEvoy pitched the last inning.

Stiely and Coffman worked for the Browns, the latter being charged with the defeat.

Klein Hits 2 Homers, But Pirates Win, 6-5

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Ray Kremer, Pirate ace, turned back the Phils here today, 6 to 5, in a hard-fought struggle.

Chuck Klein hit his thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth home runs of the season in addition to two singles. A five-run rally in the fourth inning was too much for the Phillies to overcome.

SPECULATORS AWAIT NEW DEVELOPMENTS

TIMID ONES ARE SELLING

An expectant hush has settled over the Washington Stock Exchange, barometer of the local industrial and financial pulse. The reasons may be obvious, but they are at least interesting.

In the first place, the Washington Gas Co. is fighting for a revision in rates. The outcome of the present hearings before the Public Utilities Commission may have any one of various results in the opinion of the speculator. Gas rates may increase, and the income of the gas company may decrease, as the Washington public may turn to electricity and other fuels, the speculator points out. Rates may decrease, and the revenue of the gas company swell.

At any rate, Washington Gas Co. stock has been more in the limelight on the local exchange this week than any other issue. The timid are relinquishing what they have bought, while the optimistic are grabbing all they can get, according to gossip in brokerage circles. The most recent quotation on Washington Gas gives 117½ as the last sale, 122 bid and 131 asked. The par value of the stock is $20.

Reason Number Two.

Reason No. 2 comes in the form of the merger of the Federal-American 4National Bank and the Merchants Bank & Trust Co. This was the most significant development in the local financial world during the current week, and the resulting situation is by far the most interesting. The merger is expected to actually become effective on November 1, after stockholders ratify the action of the directors of the two banks. After this is done, stock of the banks will be be combined and the par value will be reduced from $100 to $20, providing the stockholders give their consent.

Stock of the two banks, until the merger becomes effective, will be listed separately. In view of this, it is not surprising that the two institutions are not now in the limelight in the local exchange. There is quite a crowd anxious to acquire stock of the two banks, according to reports, but those who already own shares are not doing any selling, from all appearances. In the words of the Arab who watched his cohorts drinking at the oasis, "Can one blame them?"

The Fifth Federal Reserve District, of which Washington is a part, with headquarters at Richmond, reports that total resources on September 17 were $197,761,000, exactly $89,675 more than they were on the preceding week. Total deposits were $63,938,000, about $2,000,000 less than the previous week.

Capital Traction Revenues.

Despite the increase in car fare, the Capital Traction Co. made more money in August than in July and just a little less than in August of last year. August gross revenues for this year were $314,513, August of last year they were $325,831. July gross revenues this year were $306,527.

These figures present an incongruity in that less passengers were transported in August than in July. However, the inconsistency is explained by the fact that the revenue for the recent month was more after all taxes and expenses were paid. Taxes for August were $2,000 more than in July, but expenses, it appears, were less.

The revenue balance, after taxes for August were paid, stood at $45,951, compared with $45,847 a year ago and $34,035 in July. After all bills and taxes were settled, the company had a surplus of $16,103 for August against $15,691 in August of last year and $4,935 in July of this year.

The board of directors of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividend of 4 per cent payable September 30 to stockholders of record September 25, 1930.

STOCK PRICES DROP AS SALES DECLINE

Issues Lose on Average of 2 Points; Turnover Sinks to 1,377,000 Shares.

BROKER LOANS INCREASE

New York, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The stock market hobbled wearily lower today, losing a couple of points on the average in a session that was nearly as lifeless as yesterday's, when prices made narrow recoveries. Sales once more dropped below 1,500,000 shares, aggregating only 1,377,000.

A selling flurry in the late trading was characteristic of the day's dealings, which were largely a succession of small bear raids. Assuming that the apathetic rally on Wednesday meant that some stock was waiting to be sold on further indications of weakness, the shorts shot at the big industrial and utility shares during the forenoon and chipped a point or two from quotations. Whenever pressure relaxed, nevertheless, the market was inclined to bob back, and bearish professionals had to work a little harder in the afternoon. Their strongest drive was toward the close, after a feeble rally had reduced or eliminating the small early losses.

Bonds showed increasing strength, bolstered by the cheapness of money which was plentifully offered at 1½ per cent, although the stock exchange rate did not get below the 2 per cent renewal. Grains were easy, which seemed to have some effect on stocks.

Copper Sales Light.

An announcement that copper producers had cut to 10¼ cents a pound proved to be incorrect, for it developed that fabricators of copper and brass products had made the reduction, and that the large producers were holding to 10¾ cents. Custom smeltera reported small sales at their recently established price of 10½.

Financial circles got a surprise after the close of the market when it was learned that brokers' loans had increased $79,000,000. This gain, in a week of declining stock prices, did not appear so startling, however, when it was recalled that temporary borrowing for income tax payments, as well as several large new security offerings, had to be taken into account. Loans have risen $20,000,000 in the last three weeks.

The steady growth of strictly investment market found further reflection in the advance of U. S. Steel preferred and National Biscuit preferred to new highs. Commission houses, unable to arouse any speculative enthusiasm, report an encouraging demand for the best grade shares, mostly in odd lots, and not all of the buying orders are confined to issues having dividend priority.

Utility Shares Are Soft.

Merchandising and utility stocks were among the softest of the day. Yesterday's small gains in the latter group brought prompt profit taking, with resultant net declines of a couple of points in American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American & Foreign Power, American Water Works and North American. Safeway Stores and R. H. Macy lost 3 and Montgomery Ward, Sears-Roebuck and Kroger Grocery about 1.

American Can was a heavy industrial, dropping 3 points on the day. United States Steel and Westinghouse sagged 2 each, General Motors ¾, and Radio, American Tobacco "B," International Nickel and General Electric a point or more. Auburn Auto and Worthington Pump closed 5 points lower, while Eastman Kodak was down nearly 4. There was some activity in the American Agricultural Chemical stocks when the terms of the proposed reorganization were announced. The preferred rallied 6 points, later losing half of its rise, while the common broke to a new low.

Wheat, closing barely steady, dipped ⅝ of a cent on reports of substantial Russian shipments and in sympathy with the Winnipeg market. Corn eased ⅜ to a full cent under September liquidation. Cotton closed a point higher to a point lower.

Chinese currencies again moved upward as the price of silver rose to 37 cents an ounce. Other foreign exchange rates were firm. The French franc rallied to around the levels of a fortnight ago.

INVESTMENT BUYING SENDS BONDS RISING

Several Rail, Industrial and Utility Issues Advance to New 1930 Peaks.

FOREIGN GROUP ACTIVE

New York, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Prices of domestic bonds were further bolstered today by investment buying, and not only railroad issues but also some utility and industrial issues climbed into new high ground for the year. The price level as reflected in the composite averages reached a new peak for 1930 and is only 6-10 of a point under the best figure of 1928, the year when the previous buying movement in bonds reached its apex.

Selling dominated the trend of foreign issues, and some of the issues that have been adversely affected by political developments lost ground, the German International 5½s slipping to a new low for the year. Buying of U. S. Governments was on a small scale. Active issues registered small gains with the exception of Liberty 3½s, which moved contrariwise.

Bonds of the Boston & Maine Railroad were strong, and buying inspired by anticipation of their addition to the New York State Savings Bank legal list pushed prices of the 5s to new highs for 1930.

New tops were registered also by Missouri Pacific 5s of 1965, Erie Construction 4s, Hocking Valley 4½s, Hudson & Manhattan 5s, Long Island 4s, Mobile & Birmingham gold 4s, Norfolk & Western 4s, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati & St. Louis 5s.

American Telephone 5s of 1960 climbed to 107, a new high for the year, and Kansas City Power 4½s, New York Telephone 4½s, King County 4s and Laclede 5½s D forged ahead. Industrial issues were not neglected. National Dairy 5¼s were extensively purchased at the year's best price, and oil and steel company issues were active and firm.

Rock Island 4½s was the most active issue in the stock privilege group which was steady. The railroad issue was fairly firm. Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron 6s and Lautaro nitrate warrant 6s lost ground.

Turnover of German 5½s was heavy. The 7s, so-called Dawes issue, declined ¼. South Americans were mixed.

CLAIRVOYANTS

608 12th St. N.W.

Over Woolworth's 5c & 10c Store

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been. Just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry; whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travel, lost or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.

Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay

CITY COUNCIL HEARS WATER RATE VIEWS

Alexandrians Hold Over for Further Study Petition Seeking Increases.

MENTION OF PROTESTS

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

At the meeting of the city council yesterday, at which the bid of the Seaboard Investment Trust, of Boston, for the purchase of the city gas plant for $750,000 was accepted, a formal communication was received from the Alexandria Water Co. in regard to a verbal proposition made by its representatives at a former meeting to charge the city for water used for fire-fighting purposes and also to increase the rates for domestic consumption.

Councilman Fannon introduced a resolution protesting against the proposed domestic increase, which was seconded by Mr. Ticer, but was lost by the vote of 3 to 2. In the discussion before the vote was cast Councilman Herbert stated that he was not in sympathy with the proposed increase in rates; but inasmuch as the company has written the council enumerating many changes and improvements it proposes to make in the property, he felt that the matter should be given further consideration before taking definite action. Councilman Lamond also felt that action at this time would be rather hasty. He stated that he had heard considerable protest against the proposed increase, and he moved that the communication from the water company be received and held for further consideration. This resolution was adopted.

Attorney Gardner L. Boothe appeared on behalf of the Standard Oil Co., which has purchased the property at the southwest corner of Washington and Wilkes street for the purpose of erecting a gasoline filling station and stated it had been his understanding and that of his clients when the property was purchased from Mrs. Agnes Cael that the council had granted a permit for the erection of a filling station on the entire property, which includes not only the corner lot, but the Cael residence, with a total frontage on Washington street of approximately 120 feet.

It had later developed, however, that only the corner lot, with a frontage of 58 feet, was included in the filling station permit, and Mr. Boothe felt that his clients would not be interested in the project with the reduced area. The application for the permit was made originally without a sketch showing the boundaries, but this sketch, with a letter of transmittal was submitted by Attorney Charles Henry Smith, acting for Mrs. Cael, on September 23, 1929, and the permit was granted October 3, 1929. When the sketch was examined, the misunderstanding became apparent. It was finally decided to hold the matter open for further consideration at a later meeting of the council.

Col. Clarence Deems, professor of military science and tactics of the Alexandria High School, submitted a communication, and another was received from the local post of the American Legion, asking that a target range be included in the plans for the proposed new high school building. No definite plans have been considered for the proposed new building, and these communications were held over.

Estimates for repairing Patrick street between Duke and Wolfe; Henry street between Duke and Wilkes; Janneys lane from Quaker lane to King street, were received and held over. A petition for a sanitary sewer on First street to the eastern right of way of the sewer on Washington street was approved and $600 appropriated for the work.

A communication was received from the Woman's Exchange, now at 108 South Patrick street, to remove to 125 NoNrth Washington street, and permission was granted for the change.

A communication from J. W. Howard, of the Virginia Public Service Co., relative to the abatement of the alleged smoke nuisance from the company's plant on the river front was received.

A communication was received from the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce protesting against the installation of one-man trolley cars between Alexxandria and Washington was received. The council, however, felt that the plan should be given a trial, and no action was taken.

Complaints having been received from residents of the section at Payne and Princess streets of Pentecostal services being continued until a late hour at night, the city manager was directed to see that the meetings were held at a reasonable hour.

Gov. John Garland Pollard and his daughter, Miss Suzanna Pollard, will arrive in this city this afternoon and be met by Mayor Carroll Pierce, the official host of the city, and escorted to Gadsby's Tavern, where they will be guests at the tea to be given by the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Virginia, in honor of the delegates to the Fidac congress being held n Washington.

The official hostess ta the affair will be Mrs. B. M. Roszel, of Winchester, department president, with Miss Cora A. Vaughan, of Franklin, department Fidac chairman, and they will be assisted by Past Department Presidents Mrs. William P. Sadler, of Warrenton; Mrs. E. B. Cameron, of Petersburg; Mrs. W. W. Townes, of Petersburg, and Mrs. W. A. Baker, of Winchester, and the alternate national executive committeewoman, Mrs. Robert T. Barton, of Winchester, and Mrs. Reba Barrett Smith, of Alexandria, representing her mother, the late Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, who was the first president in the State organization and the second national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Committees from the local American LeLgion Auxiliary are in charge of arrangements for the Department of Virginia. Three hundred guests are expected to attend the tea in this historic building, which is now being restored as a permanent home for the local American LeLgion Post.

Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan addressed a letter to the city council yesterday stressing the necessity for additional policemen in Alexandria, and stating the present force is inadequate for proper protection, and referring in complimentary terms to the "splendid cooperation received from the Metropolitan Police of Washington." His letter, which follows, was taken under consideration.

"The Honorable City Council of Alexandria, Alexandria, Va.

"Gentlemen—I am taking the liberty of addressing you upon a matter of public safety. The shocking and dreadful crimes recently committed in our city have emphasized the need of increased police facilities. The present police force is not only inadequate for proper public protection, but is insufficient in number to permit night patrols with reasonable safety to the patrolmen.

"As the prosecuting attorney I receive detailed reports of all high crimes committed in the city, and by this means my office i skept informed as to the crime conditions in Alexandria. An analysis reveals that the desperate crimes committed in this community within the last 27 months have been perpetrated by transients, and not by members of our resident population. To sustain this statement, I cite you the case of Sergt. McClary, shot in June, 1929, by Lilly, a fugitive from North Carolina; of Officer Pierce, murdered by a bandit passing through from South Carolina; of the almost fatal shooting of Officer Crack, of the Arlington County police, within a few yards of the city line last winter by a bootlegger transporting his wares through Virginia from a neighboring State, and of the brutal attack upon Officer Stewart by a nonresident a few days ago. We have reason to believe that the murder of Sergt. Hummer in June, 1928, was the work of another fugitive. In addition, the records disclose numerous burglaries by this same transient criminal.

With five trunk lines of railroad passing through, two enormous railroad yards where nearly all the freight trains from the North and South stop, and occupying a position at which all the main highways to and from the South on the East Coast converge, Alexandria is the stopping off point for the roving criminal. Therefore, because of her peculiar position the city's needs in the way of police can not be measured only by the usual standards of area and population.

I urge upon you the seriousness of this situation, not in criticism but in the performance of my duty to prevent crime as well as to punish it. Our police department is energetic, game, and well directed, and with the splendid cooperation received from the Metropolitan police force of Washington, has accomplished much. If I can be of any service in your consideration and solution of this matter, I shall be glad to have you call me.

Respectfully yours,
ALBERT V. BRYAN,
Attorney for the Commonwealth for Alexandria.

Dog Is Sentenced to Death As Owners Weep in Court

But Fredericksburg Justice Says He Will Stay Execution if Veterinary Will Observe Pet, Which Bit Child, for Symptoms of Rabies.

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 18.—Jack, a 2-year-old dog, with collie and German shepherd blood in his veins, went on trial in police court here for his life and was sentenced to death by Justice Henry Dannehl for biting a child. When the death sentence was pronounced by the justice, Nannie Bundy, colored, and her son, Willie, owners of the dog, burst into tears, the boy grasping his pet around the body and squeezing him affectionately.

Justice Dannehl who ordered the dog killed and his head sent to Richmond State health authorities for examination for symptoms of rabies, stated that a stay of execution would be granted if a veterinary would consent to take the responsibility of caring for Jack while he was observed for outward signs of the dreaded animal scourge.

Willie and his mother immediately began search for a veterinary, while Jack remained behind in jail.

Five years ago a trained collie dog named Mac was tried in police court here on a similar count and convicted. His owner, L. W. McWane, appealed the case and the lower court's decision was reversed by the late Judge John T. Goolrick, after Mac had been confined in a cell for fifteen days.

SMITH SEEN LOADING GUN AFTER SHOOTING

SAW MAN'S RETREAT

Boydton, Va., Sept. 18 (A.P.).—J. F. Hutchens testified in the murder trial of Garland Smith here today that he saw Smith rise from a ditch to reload his gun after a volley had been fired into a group of dry raiders on December 29, 1929, taking two lives.

Hutchens said he led the ill-fated party whose two members, Mack Tuck and R. A. Puryear, were fatally shot from ambush near Clarksville last December. Smith, a 22-year-old North Carolinian, was convicted of the murder of Puryear, granted a writ of error by the supreme court, and faces trial for the murder of Tuck.

Hutchens testified he again saw Smith as he retreated into the woods after a second load had been fired at the officers, who, led by Hutchens, had raided a still and captured Will Smith, Arthur Smith and Burton Smith, the defendant's father, brother and uncle.

Two shots, Hutchens said, were fired from a distance of 27 paces.

Smith pleaded not guilty today when a jury was chosen from 40 Charlotte County men after Judge N. S. Turnbull yesterday allowed a change of venire sought by Gordon Ambler, Smith's defense counsel, of Richmond, but denied an application for change of venue.

Spectators who crowded the courtroom were searched for weapons. Nobody was found to be armed.

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., Sept. 18.—Six men barely escaped being burned to death this morning when the yacht Ottree, owned by George Dawson, was burned in the Choptank River. Mr. Dawson, a prominent banker in Philadelphia and a native of Talbot County, Md., comes here to spend some time every year fishing. He had on board his yacht, which is a cabin cruiser, himself, George Youngston, Michael McCordy, Louis Wallace, of Philadelphia; his nephew, J. Dawson Stafford, and Dr. Bernard J. Delaney, of Easton.

Flames from an exploded gasoline stove enveloped the yacht. The men jumped into the small tender to go ashore, but it capsized as they were about 150 yards from shore. They swam to the beach.

County Commissioner Percy W. Harrison took Mr. Youngston, who was badly burned, to the Emergency Hospital, where he is in a critical condition. The others received slight burns on the legs and arms.

The first well should be completed in November. These wells will assure water in any future droughts. First, however, the company has agreed to try to open one or more similar wells to give immediate relief.

ARLINGTON LIBRARY TO SEEK QUARTERS

Officers Aroused at Rumor They Will Be Offered Space in Clinic.

TRADE BODY GATHERS

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Officers of the Arlington District Library, aroused at rumors that the county board of supervisors will offer the basement of the Clarendon clinic as quarters for the library, made plans at an executive committee meeting last night to defeat such a move. The officers will appear before the board of supervisors at the special meeting Monday night, and again request that suitable quarters be provided.

Mrs. Mary Lockwood, executive committee member, declared t hat since both Jefferson and Washington districts are provided with suitable quarters for their libraries, she felt that Arlington district was entitled to the same consideration, and that the library should not be compelled to appeal to the public for rent.

In an informal discussion, members of the committee said the conclusion of the meeting that the basement of the Clarendon clinic would not fill the needs of the library. The only available entrance is in the rear of the building. The committee members said that, due to the dampness of the basement, valuable books would be destroyed, books it has taken seven years to collect.

It was the opinion of the library officials, tha tit would endanger the health of Arlington County children forced to go to the basement of the clinic, where the main building, a frame structure, is only nine inches from the ground, to get their books.

Speaking at the fall membership meeting of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce held last night in Clarendon, Allen C. Saville, of Richmond, consulting engineer, in a comprehensive discussion on the question of an adequate sewerage system for the county declared the county is rapidly becoming a city, and the time is here for the preparation of a comprehensive program which would cover a period of years.

He stated that a complete county system would be prohibitive in cost, and the increased tax necessary would be too great a burden on the people. What should be done is to first prepare a plan covering the thickly settled sections of the county, providing sewers for about twenty years, he said. The plan must be studied from both a financial and engineering standpoint.

Discussing methods of constructing disposal plants which would be necessary in Arlington County, he declared that they could be built in the unit system and additions made at any time necessary.

Mr. Saville stressed the point that the county should be studied as one sanitary district and not cut up into small areas.

Referring to Henrico County at Richmond, Mr. Saville stated that an area comprising about 12 square miles is included in a sanitary district. The cost is 30 cents assessment on the $100 assessed valuation in addition to a frontage charge which totals about $15 a year, which is paid only by the home owner who is served with sewers. The $15 charge is for maintenance and operation.

Mr. Saville, when asked by Ashton C. Jones, president of the chamber of commerce, what it would cost to prepare a comprehensive program and adequate plan, stated that the cost would be between $10,000 and $20,000.

While no action was taken, it was decided to continue the study and to make an effort to create a united interest in the movement, with the hope that at an early date another effort may be made to give to the rapidly growing sections of the county a modern sewerage system.

Because of preschool clinics during the summer, Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, stated yesterday that practically all children who will enter the first grade Monday have been examined and all defects corrected.

While all children will be required to be vaccinated, Dr. Chichester stated that this can be done either by the family physician or at his office at the courthouse. The hours for week-days will be from 8 to 10 in the morning and on Saturday from 8 to 12 o'clock.

Records in the county clerk's office reveal a large number of suits filed for the collection of delinquent real estate taxes.

As stated yesterday, by County Clerk William H. Duncan, persons against whom suits have been filed still have the opportunity to come to his office and pay amounts due plus costs which have been added and still save the added costs which will result should the cases go to the court.

All suits which have not been taken cared for by persons against whom they have been filed will come up at the October term of the Circuit Court which convenes Monday, October 20.

The meeting of principals of all white schools in the county will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Washington Lee High School, according to County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp. Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, will address the meeting.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the teachers and principals of the colored schools will meet at the John Langston School at Halls Hill.

Tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock the teachers of all the white schools will meet in the auditorium of the Washington-Lee High School to complete plans for the opening of the schools on Monday morning.

The case of C. A. McCoy, charged with having erected a building in violation of the county zoning ordinance, in that he failed to obtain the necessary permit, was dismissed in Police Court yesterday by Substitute Trial Justice Bryan Gordon.

Attorneys Jesse Phillips & Klinge, counsel for the defendant, raised the point that the present zoning ordinance does not require a permit before building.

According to Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, there are two cases of typhoid fever in Arlington County both of which he attributes to the use of water from an open well, and not from any milk supply.

He stated that both cases are in a small colored settlement between the Washington-Richmond highway and the Potomac River and are being isolated to prevent spread of the disease. Every precaution has been thrown about the settlement.

The Arlington County Monarch Club meeting yesterday at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse, completed plans for the special meeting, which will be held at the clubhouse Tuesday night, at which time members from clubs from Richmond, Baltimore and Washington will be guests.

C. E. Darnell charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor was held for the action of the grand jury by Substitute Trial Justice Bryan Gordon. Bond was fixed at $500.

Charged with reckless driving, Alfred Moore was fined $14.25, including costs. An appeal was noted and bond was set at $50.

Fellowship Council, No. 49, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, will hold a card party tonight at the home of Mrs. Charles T. Taylor on Milton avenue at Clarendon.

Maryland's Roads Employ 5,000 Men

Efforts Will Be Made to Keep Big Force Up During Winter.

Baltimore, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—At the peak of the most ambitious construction program in its history, the Maryland State Roads Commission is now employing, directly or indirectly, more than 5,000 laborers, according to Harry D. Williar, jr., chairman of the commission.

Although the bulk of the concrete construction will be stopped on October 15 or thereabouts, due to weather conditions, every effort will be made to continue the employment of as many of these laborers as possible through the winter, Mr. Williar said.

All of the program which may be maintained during cold weather, such as the improvement of road shoulders, grading and other operations not impeded by changes in temperatures, will be maintained to aid in so far as is possible, the unemployment situation.

PLANE DROPS; TWO OCCUPANTS ESCAPE

Naval Academy Sea Craft Is Demolished in Fall to Farm Woods.

MEN SLIGHTLY INJURED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 18.—One of the fleet of seaplanes stationed at the Naval Academy was demolished today, but the two occupants escaped with their lives, when the craft fell 2,000 feet to crash into a wooded section at Harness Creek Inland, on South River, near this city.

The plane fell on the Truxton Beall Farm, where aid was rendered the two occupants. The pilot was Chief Aviation Pilot M. G. Haven, with Aviation Mechanic C. S. Heath accompanying him. It was announced today by an aid to Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison, superintendent of the academy, that an investigation had been ordered into the crash. The pilot is said to have lost control of the plane which was completely demolished. The plane was on a strictly local flight, the authorities announced.

Haven was doing a loop when the compartment holding the tool kit, the crank and first-aid kit gave way, striking the pilot, causing him to lose the controls, he is reported as saying. It is claimed also that the engine stalled and that the stick jammed about the same time, as the plane went into a spiral dive earthward.

The first tree the plane struck cut off one wing and lessened the speed of the plane considerably. Had the craft struck the first tree solidly it probably would have meant the death of the occupants. However, the plane brushed along through the tree tops before crashing into a trunk. Fortunately, the pilot and mechanic were able to get from the pit without assistance. Heath sustained a cut lip and Haven a gash above the eye. They were also bruised but not seriously injured.

The new Boy Scout Hall at Annandale will be formally dedicated this evening by its owners. Scout Troop No. 150. The program will open with the investiture ceremony for three new members. The Rev. W. R. Gray, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church, will be in charge of the dedication services. The principal speakers of the evening will be Edmund H. Allen, president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, and former Senator Joseph Bristow, of Kansas, who now lives near Annandale. William L. Leith, of Alexandria, Scout executive for northern Virginia, will present a Boy Scout movie program. The scouts' mothers will conduct a social hour, during which a musical program will be one of the features.

The troop has recently been reorganized and the membership divided into three groups which are based on age and the attainment of the required scout merits. Group one includes all boys 16 years old and over, who must be first-class scouts; group two includes those between the ages of 14 and 16 years who must be at least second-class scouts, and group three is for boys from 12 to 14 years old, and is for tenderfoot scouts.

Assistant Scoutmaster Raymond Lynch will have charge of group one. Oliver Besley, senior patrol leader, will supervise group two, and Edwin Lynch, junior assistant scoutmaster, will take charge of group three. Wilber Dean has been elected patrol leader of group one, with Demming Lewis as assistant. William Lewis was elected patrol leader of group two, and Harry Carrico patrol leader of group three. H. W. Bright and Ernest Cox, who were convicted in a justice of peace court for stealing a $20 bill from J. A. Madden during a business transaction at Madden's place of business on the Washington-Richmond highway, were found not guilty by a jury yesterday in the Fairfax County Circuit Court, to which they had appealed their case.

Because of the unexpected delay in hearing the case against Nickolas Breeden, the court docket has become crowded and several of the cases have had to be continued from one day to the next. To eliminate this and to avoid further complications so as to resume the regular schedule Judge Walter T. McCarthy announced yesterday that until the court had caughs up he would hear six criminal cases each day in the rotation of which they were originally set by him on the opening day of the term. The case of Joseph Kidd and G. L. Davis, on an appeal from a justice of the peace court on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, will be the first heard by the court this morning. This will be followed by the case of Thomas P. Johnson, of Merrifield, who was arrested last spring for driving while drunk.

There will be a meeting of the Mount Vernon Grange this evening in Sherwood Hall at Woodlawn.

Bear in West Virginia Shows Good Breeding

Special to The Washington Post.

Webster Springs, W. Va., Sept. 18.—Clyde Riffle and Charles Anderson, employes of the Pardee-Curtin Lumber Co., say an unusual black bear is roaming mountains in this locality.

They met Bruin on their way to Bergoo the other night. He emerged from the darkness ahead of them, brushed against Clyde's leg and lumbered on toward Bergoo, a mile distant, without so much as a grunt or a turn of the head. This may be bear etiquet for Yellowstone National Park, Riffle and Anderson say, but it has not been the custom heretofore in West Virginia mountains.
